

ROOSEVELT SAYS HOUSING BILL LOSS SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

Quotes Latin Phrase and Asserts That Goes for Roll Call Too—Implies Threat of Reprisal.

DODGES QUESTION AS TO THIRD TERM

Refuses to Affirm or Deny He Will Appeal to Country—Only Two Speeches Scheduled.

By RAYMOND P. BRANTZ
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—With an implied threat of reprisal, President Roosevelt at his press conference today observed that the rejection of the administration's $800,000,000 slum clearance bill by the House yesterday spoke for itself.

The President's actual phrase was the Latin legal saying, "res ipsa loquitur," which he said applied to the 191-170 rejection vote. Then in an undertone, he added that the same comment applied to the roll call. The measure was defeated by a coalition of Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats.

Roosevelt again dodged a third-term question. A reporter asked if he agreed or disagreed with the statement of Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio yesterday that "no sensible man would want to be President after 1941."

The President asked if Senator Taft had said that about his own candidacy. The laughter which followed did not, however, deter the inquiring reporter, a correspondent for the New York Times.

"Will you answer the question, Mr. President?" he persisted. Roosevelt replied that he thought he had given an awfully good answer.

The President refused to affirm or deny that he would take to the country his recent defeats in the Senate and the House, the results of revolts by various anti-New Deal Democratic blocs. When a reporter asked if he would talk about these lost programs on his trip to the West Coast in October, he replied that he had only two speeches scheduled, one for the opening of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, the other at the San Francisco Fair.

From this meager information, he laughed, the reporters could not figure out any such story.

Plans After Adjournment.
The President disclosed that after Congress adjourned he would remain two full days in Washington, go to Hyde Park for a week, and then "disappear" on a cruiser for about 10 days.

Rudolph Forster, executive clerk at the White House, he said, had informed him that between 350 and 400 bills were due to come up for executive consideration after the adjournment of Congress.

For two full days, he continued, he would remain in Washington to see any members of the Senate and House who wanted to talk to him about anything. At various intervals, he said, he would sign or veto the bills. The week spent at Hyde Park, he added, would be devoted to consideration of the bills.

He did not know where he would board the cruiser, but guessed it would be New York. On his return from the cruise he will come back to Washington and commute between here and Hyde Park until October. The Pacific Coast trip is scheduled to start Oct. 1.

The President's only comment on the House action in eliminating $119,000,000 for the Surplus Commodities Corporation in the last deficiency bill was that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was right when he said that failure to appropriate this money would work a definite hardship on the farmers of the country.

Asked if he intended to appoint three more executive assistants, to supplement the three already named, the President said he expected to fill two of the remaining vacancies and keep the other available for temporary appointments for special temporary work. The recent reorganization law authorized six assistants.

Explains Federal Projects.
Roosevelt apparently had expected many embarrassing questions about his recent defeats in Congress, and he welcomed obviously a request to discuss the latest division of work between the army engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation.

The gist of his rather extensive remarks was that the army engineers would have charge of projects relating to navigation and flood control, while the Reclamation Service would devote its attention to irrigation and power projects on the upper reaches of streams.

Both agencies, he pointed out, have large projects in hand and this created a healthy rivalry between two Federal groups. At present, he said, about three-fourths of the army engineers' construction work was done by civilians and it would be a mistake to let the engineers devote too much time to rivers and harbors projects. Their primary function, he said, was military and they should at all times be prepared for service at the front.

Asserts Not Even 'Big Boys' Asked Street to Explain

Street and Robert J. Foliole, Chicago lawyer, who was Street's co-trustee for the 30 per cent official expense allotment, Haid asserted, saying that Foliole objected to the compromise.

"Foliole wouldn't go along with him, but Street was going through anyhow," Haid declared. When the Special Master expressed interest in the strained relationship of the trustees, Haid pointed out, after some hesitation, that this was a matter of common knowledge in Chicago and elsewhere.

"Mr. Street said to me once he was having difficulty with Foliole," the witness continued. "Mr. Foliole felt the case ought not to be compromised, but Street felt if a good compromise could be made, it was the thing to do. Foliole would not agree with him."

$100,000 Raised in 1935.
There was testimony previously that Street met Eastern insurance executives in New York May 2, 1935, a half month before O'Malley signed the compromise. It was at that time that Street raised $100,000 for the down payment on the collection.

Haid said he helped Street collect from the companies a levy of 5 per cent of the impounded premiums in March, 1936, at the same time the 11 per cent distribution from the unused balance of the official expense fund was made.

"All I know," Haid remarked, "is that Street asked me to do this and I thought nothing of it."

He said he had known Street for several years and formerly was associated with him in the insurance business. He insisted that he had every confidence in Street's integrity, but that Street was "very blunt and didn't mince any words."

J. D. Erskine, secretary of the Insurance Executive Association, who preceded Haid on the stand, told of the May, 1935, meeting Street held in New York, in the association's offices.

Erskine could not recall whether notices for Street's 1935 meeting were sent out by Haid. He said he knew nothing about the down payment collection. Haid told him after the meeting, he continued, that Street, a Chicagoan, had come East "to discuss with a number of executives the settlement of the Missouri rate payment and that Mr. Street had made arrangements to collect a sum of money in connection with the expenses thereof."

The amount to be raised was not indicated by Haid, nor did Haid make any further comment, Erskine added.

All that Erskine knew about the use of the fund Street raised was that it was for "legal expenses," he insisted, with the declaration that he did not know the exact nature of these expenses.

In this connection his testimony linked with that of more than 20 insurance company officers, who have told the Special Master they were requested by Street, Erskine or Haid to give a "cut-back" of 5 per cent of impounded Missouri premiums for a "legal expense fund" for the compromise, although only 14 per cent of the impounded money had been used for lawyers' fees and other costs after the 30 per cent slice of it had been set aside for that purpose.

Erskine said he first became aware of the size of the "legal expense fund" in the early spring of 1938 when he was directed to compute the 5 per cent "cut-back" levies against the companies.

File of Checks on Desk.
"Mr. Haid called me into his office," the witness continued. "On his desk was a pile of checks representing an 11 per cent payment (to the companies from the impounded fund). There also was a list of those companies involved with the amounts of the refund opposite their names. He stated that he had been called upon to make the distribution."

Asked if Haid had said who requested him to handle the matter, Erskine replied: "Mr. Haid said Mr. Street had requested the services of this office. After looking over the list, we thought it would help materially if the companies were grouped. I proceeded to do that."

Haid gave him to understand, said Erskine, that the 5 per cent collection was to be made simultaneously with the 11 per cent distribution, and told him the collection was for legal costs.

Solicitation by Visit and Phone.
The witness told of making personal visits to between 15 and 18 insurance offices in New York and in telephone calls to others, including offices at Boston, Springfield, Mass.; Glens Falls, N. Y.; and Watertown, N. Y. Counsel for the Missouri Insurance Department asked why he did not write instead of telephone.

"I think primarily the element of time was involved," he answered. Asked if he meant Haid and Street were in a hurry for the money, he said: "The truth is, I probably took more time than was necessary to prepare the list. It took him two or three days, he explained, and before he was through Haid asked him to hurry."

"Didn't Mr. Haid tell you Mr. Street was in a hurry for the money?" asked Charles L. Henson, the State lawyer.

"I can't recall," Erskine said, "but I have that impression."

He said his telephone calls followed a pattern—that Street had requested the services of the association in mailing out the 11 per cent distribution and had asked that a check for 5 per cent be collected at the same time. He always explained the 5 per cent was for "legal expenses," he said. He made no attempt to amplify because he did not know what the expenses were, he testified.

Henson brought out that Erskine knew a sum for expenses had been set aside by the Court.

"Did you ask Mr. Haid to explain that?" Henson asked.

Down Payment on Bribe.
Street's first collection, largely among the group he referred to as "big boys," was $100,000, in May, 1935. It was used as the down payment on the bribe. O'Malley, then Missouri Insurance Superintendent, signed the compromise agreement a few days later, at the behest of Pendergast, his political boss. The final collection under the 5 per cent levy made with the aid of Haid and Erskine, was in March, 1936, a month after the decree of settlement was handed down. The levy was spread among the 137 stock fire insurance companies involved in the protracted Federal Court litigation over a 16-2-3 per cent rate increase.

Impounded premiums amounted to $9,893,000. The compromise, set aside by a three-judge Federal Court at Kansas City after Pendergast and O'Malley were sent to prison for evading Federal income taxes on their bribe money, resulted in distribution of 20 per cent among the policyholders.

How 80 Pct. Was Split.
Division of the other 80 per cent consisted of 50 per cent direct to the companies and 30 per cent for expenses of the settlement, placed in trust with Street and Attorney Foliole, a Chicagoan. Out of the 30 per cent, 14 per cent was actually used for recognized expenses, leaving 16 per cent due the companies under the compromise terms. They were given 11 per cent of this, in addition, traded checks on the other 5 per cent, the means adopted by Street for collecting the 5 per cent levy.

HOLC FOLLOWS FHA IN REDUCING INTEREST

Cut to 4.5 Per Cent Will Save Borrowers $5,000,000 a Year, Fahey Says.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, announced today a reduction in Home Owners' Loan Corporation interest rates from 5 to 4½ per cent.

Fahey estimated the cut would save borrowers from the corporation $5,000,000 or more a year. The reduction will apply to all borrowers who meet their obligations in accord with their contracts, he said. It is to become effective as soon as the necessary detailed arrangements can be completed throughout the country.

The cut followed a reduction last Monday of one-half of one per cent on mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration on small homes. The FHA cut, effective last Tuesday, scaled the rate down to 4½ per cent.

HOLC officials said the cut in interest rates, which is not retroactive, would apply to more than 800,000 of the approximately 850,000 borrowers now on the corporation's books.

It was stated that more than 726,000 of the loans are in "good shape" and that more than 120,000 borrowers are making adjusted payments "that give us hope they will come through." The interest reduction will help those making adjusted payments, it was said.

Beginning in June, 1933, the HOLC made loans to more than 1,000,000 home owners who were in danger of losing their homes. The corporation's original loans were made up until June, 1936, since when loans have been made to original borrowers for tax payments and improvement on property.

Meanwhile, the House completed congressional action on legislation to extend from 15 to 25 years the amortization period on HOLC mortgages.

BILL TO PROMOTE RELATIONS WITH SOUTH AMERICA PASSED

Lending of Exports, Imports, and Air Travel.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—Congress sent to President Roosevelt yesterday the legislation he had requested to promote economic and cultural relations with other American republics.

The bill, passed by the Senate after previous approval by the House, would authorize the President to extend the first of the Inter-American Conference in Buenos Aires in 1936 and at the eighth Pan-American Conference at Lima last year.

An interdepartmental committee appointed by the President drafted the program and estimated it would cost $998,804. The bill covers four projects, including:

A survey to determine what Latin American products could be put on United States markets without competing with goods produced in this country.

The lending of technical experts to study agricultural resources and problems in Latin American nations.

Co-operation through the Civil Aeronautics Authority for unification of international air laws and encouragement of air travel.

Development of general cultural relations, including exchange of books and motion pictures.

WORKERS IN ARMOUR SOAP PLANT VOTE FOR CIO UNION Election Is First Since Threat of Strikers to Get National Contract.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4 (AP).—Employees in the soap auxiliary plant of Armour & Co. voted yesterday to designate the United Packing House Workers, a CIO affiliate, as their bargaining agency.

It was the first election in an Armour plant since the Packing House Workers' organizing committee threatened July 16 to call strikes at 17 plants if the company declined to negotiate a national contract with the CIO.

The election was conducted under supervision of the National Labor Relations Board.

I. S. Dorfman, acting regional director of the board, said 660 ballots were cast for the CIO union and 148 against it. Out of 923 employees eligible, 848 voted, but 24 ballots were protested, two were blank and four were void.

The election, union officers said, would have no bearing on plans to call a strike. The union has contended it needed a nation-wide contract to handle wages and working conditions satisfactorily. The company was rejected the union's demands, contending it was bargaining now with the CIO in plants where it was certified.

In the case, the companies returned the 80 per cent to the custody of Federal Court Judge at Kansas City last July 1, awaiting a new decision in the case. The Missouri Insurance Department has sued to have the entire sum distributed among the policyholders. In preparation for a decision, the Court directed Special Master Barnett to make a thorough investigation of the compromise and report by Oct. 1.

The hearings will be transferred to Hartford, Conn., Monday.

Senate Votes to Restore Big Farm Fund

The Senate, Senator Adams (Dem., Colorado), acting chairman of the Appropriations Committee, asked for immediate consideration, despite the fact no printed copies were available, in order to expedite adjournment.

Senator Austin of Vermont, acting Republican leader, said Republicans would not object to this procedure because of the emergency. Senator Byrnes (Dem., South Carolina), a member of the Appropriations Committee, said the only Senate reduction was elimination of a $300,000 House-approved item to begin construction of a rigid airship for the navy.

$119,000,000 Restored.
The biggest increase was the $119,000,000 for the Commodity Credit Corporation, which makes the Government loans on farm crops.

Only a short time before the bill reached the chamber it had been approved in its present form by the appropriation subcommittee which restored the $119,000,000 item for the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The action came almost simultaneously with indorsement by President Roosevelt of Secretary Wallace's insistence that the money for the Commodity Credit Corporation be restored to the bill from which it was removed by the House. Immediately the full appropriations committee was called to confirm the subcommittee's action so the bill could be rushed to the Senate floor for debate this afternoon.

At his press conference, the President said the Secretary of Agriculture was right in emphasizing the need for $119,000,000 for the Federal loan agency.

The money, Wallace said, was essential to continuance of the farm loan program, and he asserted that prices of major farm crops would fall and the entire farm program be threatened if it was not granted.

Wallace appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday.

Many Members Absent.
The Senate worked today with nearly one-fourth of its membership absent. Attaches said that 22 Senators had left Washington, with more scheduled to go during the day.

Since 17 of the absent Senators were Democrats, the Administration's majority was sharply reduced and leaders sought to avoid consideration of controversial measures.

The loan fund was cut out Wednesday by an economy-minded House, which yesterday killed the last vestige of the administration lending program by voting 191 to 170, not to consider the Senate's $800,000,000 slum clearance and housing bill.

The latter action was taken in the face of a plea by Representative Sabath (Dem., Illinois), dean of the House, that "the President is vitally interested in passage of this bill."

Wage-Hour and Security.
The House leaders eliminated another controversial issue with an announcement by Representative Rayburn (Dem., Texas), that amendments to the Wage-Hour Law would not be considered in this session. Both chambers approved a minor bill exempting operators of small telephone exchanges from the act.

The impasse over the Social Security law ended when Senate conferees agreed to discard the so-called Connally amendment which would have required the Federal Government to provide increased aid to states for old age pension payments.

House conferees agreed to accept all other Senate amendments which had been in disagreement and dropped the House-approved Connally amendment which would have provided a formula for reduction of state payroll taxes where unemployment compensation reserves were adequate.

Signs of Feeling.
Signs of intense feeling among the conferees were noticeable, particularly when Senator Connally (Dem., Texas), left the meeting some time in advance of the others and refused to answer questions. Connally and Senator Harrison (Dem., Mississippi), both declined to sign the conference report.

The provision by Senator Connally would have required the Federal Government to pay $2 for old age assistance to every $1 furnished by a state up to a total of $40. The Government would have matched on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Among other things, the security legislation would freeze for three years the old age insurance tax of 1 per cent each on employers and employees. Under the existing law, the taxes are scheduled to increase to 1½ per cent on each next Jan. 1.

The legislation also would extend social security benefits and authorize old age insurance payments beginning next Jan. 1 instead of in 1942.

"No Material Difference."
Representative Cooper (Dem., Tennessee), told reporters the compromise would make no "material difference" in the definite tax savings provided in the original House version of the legislation. The House group had estimated possible tax savings to both workers and employers in the next three years at about $1,700,000,000.

Cooper said the discrepancy between that figure and the conference estimate of $905,000,000 was due largely to elimination of the amendment of Representative McCormack (Dem., Massachusetts), which offered tax reduction in states able to meet certain standards for unemployment compensation reserves. Cooper said tax savings under this provision would have been "speculative."

House members estimated the liberalizations proposed before the Senate acted on the measure would add about $1,200,000,000 to the cost of the program over the next five years. A Senate amendment providing that persons reaching age 65 this year would be eligible for old age assistance in 1940 if they met other qualifications would add $985,000,000 to the cost in the next 15 years.

WPA Amendments Ready.
Progress of the appropriations bill through the Senate was likely to be slow, for several members were ready with controversial amendments. Senators La Follette and Wheeler (Dem., Montana), moved to attach an amendment which would permit the refinancing of farm mortgages on long term amortization and at low interest rates. The Senate blocked an effort to write into the appropriation bill a provision restoring the "prevailing wage" on WPA projects. Under procedure requiring a two-thirds vote, the proposal lost when only 40 members voted for it to 51 against.

Senator McCarran (Dem., Nevada), led the unsuccessful fight to attach the WPA rider to the third deficiency bill. He charged that the provision requiring WPA employees to work 130 hours a month for a security wage was breaking down the pay scales in private industry. Formerly skilled WPA employees worked shorter periods of time to draw the same wages as now.

Senator Murray (Dem., Montana), gave notice of an attempt to knock out the 18-months furlough rule in the relief law.

Senator Schweikbach (Dem., Washington), said leaders might find it extremely difficult to get a final vote on the deficiency bill if he and others were thwarted in their efforts to bring up a resolution giving the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee $50,000 to continue its inquiry into industrial labor relationships.

Third Administration Setback.
Rejection of the housing bill was the third decisive setback for the administration in the House this week, following major slashes in the deficiency bill and the death of the main lending measure.

The action occasioned little surprise, for leaders knew that the same coalition was lined up against it. There were reports, however, that President Roosevelt wanted to fix the responsibility for its defeat.

Voting against consideration of the housing bill were 137 Republicans and 54 Democrats. Eight Republicans and three minor party members joined 159 Democrats in supporting it.

It was a freshman Democrat, 31-year-old Representative Albert A. Gore of Tennessee, who made the final speech against the measure. Rising in the chamber for the first time, he said:

"The United States Housing Authority is in no respect self-liquidating. It is not contemplated that any revenue from any project will ever be returned to the Government."

Dispute Over Housing Cost.
Gore estimated that even though the bill calls only for an $800,000,000 increase in the agency's borrowing power, the ultimate cost would be $2,700,000,000 through 60 annual payments from the Treasury.

After applause died away, Representative Steagall (Dem., Alabama), challenged Gore's statements about the cost. Declaring that interest charged by the Housing Authority would reduce the annual expense from $73,000,000 to $50,000,000, he said:

"This is a loan bill, despite the statements made here calculated to create a misunderstanding."

In contrast to the housing defeat, administration forces took some consolation from the decision not to bring up the wage-hour amendments. They had been fighting a proposal by Representative Barden (Dem., North Carolina), to exempt workers who process farm products. The whole question will be over to the 1940 session.

Vote on Farm Funds.
The vote by which the Senate added to the deficiency appropriations bill today the $119,000,000 asked for by Secretary Wallace for Government loans on farm projects:

For the appropriation (60): Democrats—Adams, Andrews, Bailey, Bankhead, Barkley, Brown, Bulow, Burke, Byrnes, Clark, Idaho, Clark of Missouri, Connally, Downey, Ellender, George, Harlan, Hatch, Hayden, Herring, Johnson of Colorado, Lee, Maloney, McCarran, McKellar, Mead, Miller, Minton, Murray, Neely, O'Mahoney, Pepper, Pittman, Radcliffe, Russell, Schwellenbach, Sheppard, Smith, Stewart, Thomas of Oklahoma, Thomas of Utah, Truman, Tydings, Van Nuys, Wagner, Wheeler—46.

Missouri Democrats voting against the Housing bill—Andrews, Hennings, Nelson, Romjue, Shannon, Williams, Wood and Zimmerman. Total 10.

Missouri Democrats voting against consideration—Bell. Dewey Short, lone Republican from Missouri, did not vote.

Illinois Democrats voting against the bill—Arnold, Beam, Berman, Keller, Kelly, Kociakowski, the large Andrews, McKeeough, Maciejewski, Martin, Parsons, Sabath, Schuler and Smith.

Only three of the 17 Democrats did not vote—Mitchell of Chicago, Barnes of Jacksonville and Schuler of Belleville.

The 10 Republicans voted against the prevailing side against consideration—Allen, Arends, Chicago, field, Church, Dirksen, Johnson, Mason, Reed, Sumner and White.

TRUST INDENTURE BILL SIGNED
It Establishes Rules, Gives State Authority to Enforce Them.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt signed today the bill establishing standards for trust indentures and giving the Securities and Exchange Commission authority to enforce them.

Presented as an investment reform measure by Senator Barkley (Dem., Kentucky), the bill altered radically before final passage to restrict the SEC's power as finally approved, it fixed rules for the conduct of trustees in a variety of terms of trust indentures which set out the assets supporting the issuance of bonds and securities.

Protests against the closing of the St. Louis office, are fielded by stenographers, area superiors and timekeepers. The office received orders July 15 to close by Sept. 1 for economy reasons. The St. Louis office was transferred to the office of the Central Trades and Labor Union, City Council, and the Park Board.

Further Cut in Administration
State WPA Administrator S. Murray said today that the personnel in Missouri maintained on his present staff having been eliminated through central accounting department five district offices and WPA headquarters in Jefferson City.

That cut, he said, would make up the major part of the reduction order. Missouri administrative expenses, H. Hancock, Assistant Administrator in St. Louis, had been employed in accounting department, whom were transferred to Jefferson City office.

in a few hours, 141 local telephone

GAMBLING SHIP STILL HOLDING OFF OFFICERS

Owner Orders Out Water Hoses and Besiegers Keep Their Distance.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Aug. 4 (AP).—Tony Cornero, master of the gambling boat Rex, chalked up another victory today against besieging peace officers who want him to surrender to face State charges that his activities are illegal.

Cornero, known also as Tony Corrala, ordered out the water hoses again as a Fish and Game Commission boat drew alongside, and the officers kept their distance. He has been dousing approaching boats with water for three days. Officers have been keeping their distance for the same length of time.

He relented, however, sufficiently to accept service of a court injunction requiring him to stop the roulette wheel. It was a meaningless order because the wheels have not turned since 500 persons were removed Tuesday night and the siege started with further customers kept ashore.

Denies Plan to Change Flags.
Cornero, an admitted prohibition liquor runner, shouted remarks about conditions in general through a megaphone as he leaned over the ship's rail. He replied to a report that he would run down his American flag and apply for Japanese registry thus:

"Just another piratical lie. It's typical of the high-handed way these freebooters are treating people who don't have any jurisdiction over me. I respect the American flag as much as any man living and I'll fight anybody who says I don't."

Cornero, whose boat is one of a fleet of four vessels, contends that because the Rex is anchored three miles offshore he is outside California law. He is making his fight alone, officers having closed the other ships Tuesday night.

Two Men's Conversation.
Sheriff's Captain George Contreras reported the following conversation with Cornero—Contreras in the bobbing State boat and Cornero bellowing down from the rail:

Contreras: "Are you ready to give up?"
Cornero: "No! I'm not going to surrender. The Coast Guard tells me I'm within my rights not to allow boarders on my ship. I'm on the high seas, so keep your distance or take the consequences."

Contreras: "Do you mean you'll use force to keep us off?"
Cornero: "The Coast Guard told my skipper to use his own judgment. We're ready for action and we know how to handle pirates."

Contreras: "But, Tony, what are you going to do?"
Cornero: "I'm going to sit tight. What are you going to do?"
Contreras decided he would go ashore, but other boats kept up the blockade.

STANLEY ZALEWSKI SERVED WITH PAPERS IN OLD SUIT

Attorney-General's Action Seeking to Bar Him From Loan Business Reversed.

Stanley Zalewski, money lender, was served yesterday by a Deputy Sheriff with papers in a suit filed more than a year ago by the Attorney-General for an injunction to prevent Zalewski from continuing the small loan business. He was formerly president of the International Credit Co.

In April, 1938, he was arrested in Louisville on charges of illegal practice of law. Previously he and his firm were enjoined by Circuit Court in St. Louis from engaging in an unauthorized practice of law in the collection of small loans.

HUSBAND HAS RIGHT TO USE BEDROOM, CHICAGO JUDGE SAYS

Court Tells Wife and Stepdaughters Occupying 3, to Give One to Man.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4 (AP).—A husband is entitled to use his bedroom, if he has one, Judge Joseph Sabath ruled yesterday after John Kubu, 61 years old, complained he had three bedrooms in his home but had to sleep on a cot in the kitchen.

He testified his wife occupied one bedroom and her two daughters by a previous marriage the others.

Judge Sabath, deferring a decision on Kubu's petition for a divorce, declared:

"Meanwhile, one of the bedrooms must be placed at the disposal of Mr. Kubu and he shall be unmolested in his use of it."

had a visa to Bolivia. They obtained a six-month visitors' pass to the United States and came to Chicago three weeks ago.

"We left our homeland because of our children," Langer said. "We hoped to find opportunities to give them a better life. Tyranny forced us to become refugees."

The Langers took a basement apartment on Chicago's West Side. The manufacturer, who had salvaged $7000 of his fortune, was unemployed.

Bodies Strike Sidewalk.
The bodies struck almost simultaneously on the sidewalk of Michigan avenue near several stragglers from the late evening crowds.

The leap occurred about six hours after the woman had registered at the hotel at 5 p. m. as Mrs. Denna Frank of New York City. Pictures in her room and other evidence enabled police to establish her real identity.

No one in the hotel saw the plunge and the police said it was difficult to determine whether Mrs. Langer pushed the youngsters out the window and jumped after them, or gathered them in her arms and leaped. Her left wrist was slashed and a blood-stained razor blade was found in the room.

Police theorized the children had been sleeping and probably never knew of their doom. No outcries were heard.

On the way to their room she told the elevator operator: "The boys are tired; they are going to see their daddy in the morning."

HOOVER HAS NO COMMENT ON CANDIDACY OF TAFT

On Fishing Trip in Colorado, He Says a Person Then Can Expect Privacy.

CEDELLA, Colo., Aug. 4 (AP).—Former President Hoover sought rainbow trout yesterday in the Gunnison River in Western Colorado.

"There are two times when a man can expect privacy; in his prayers and at fishing," he remarked while sipping a lemonade at Montrose in the drug store of Rodney Anderson, Montrose County Republican chairman.

Asked about the announcement that Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio would be a candidate for the 1940 Republican presidential nomination, Hoover replied: "I have no comment."

STARK THINKS KANSAS CITY NEEDS NEW GOVERNMENT

He Is Taking No Part in Recall Movement, However.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 4 (AP).—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark said today he would take no part in the movement to recall Mayor Bryce B. Smith from Kansas City and several members of the City Council.

"I have never taken any part in local affairs and I don't intend to start now," Stark said. "I do think, however, that Kansas City needs a new government—a new broom."

MAN ONCE KIDNAPED HEADS ALBANY DEMOCRATIC GROUP

John J. O'Connell Jr. Becomes Nominal Leader of Organization
His Uncle Built.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—John J. O'Connell Jr., 30 years old, whose kidnapping six years ago attracted nation-wide attention, became nominal head last night of the political organization his family built. He was elected chairman of the Albany County Democratic Committee to succeed his uncle, Edward J. O'Connell, who died June 6.

Edward's death left Daniel P. O'Connell, still active in party leadership, the only survivor of three brothers who wrested control of this upstate county from Republicans in 1921.

In 1932 the brothers opposed the first presidential nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The organization, however, since has supported him.

In 1933 John, the new county chairman, was kidnapped and held 23 days until his uncles paid $40,000 ransom. Eight men are serving long prison sentences for the crime.

35 CENTS AN HOUR URGED IN SHOE PLANTS

Recommendation of Committee, However, Leads to Resignation of Member.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—A minimum wage of 35 cents an hour for workers in the shoe industry was recommended yesterday by a committee set up under the Wage-Hour Act. The wage would take effect in May, 1940, if approved by Elmer F. Andrews, Wage-Hour Administrator, after a public hearing.

The Wage-Hour Administration estimated the 35-cent minimum would increase the hourly wage rates of 50,000 of the industry's 234,000 workers.

Shortly before the recommendation was announced, George Noland, vice-president of the General Shoe Corporation of Nashville, Tenn., resigned from the committee, saying he was quitting as a public protest. In a letter to Andrews he said the committee was operating with insufficient data and that its actions could result in hardship to small manufacturers.

Wage-Hour officials said, however, that Noland resigned after his motion for a 32½ cent minimum was voted down, 16 to 10.

"At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Noland's letter of resignation was read to the committee," they reported. "The committee thereupon unanimously passed a resolution thanking the Wage-and-Hour division for the 'highly satisfactory' manner in which it had given the committee information on the economic and competitive conditions in the industry and stating that the economic data supplied was 'all that could be reasonably expected.'"

The 35-cent recommendation compares with 32½ cents recommended by a similar committee for the textile industry, 36 cents in the wool industry, 32 to 40 cents for various classifications in the apparel industry, 32½ to 40 cents in the hosiery industry, and 40 cents for millinery workers.

The committee announced its recommendation in a letter to Andrews from its chairman, Mgr. Francis J. Haas, of Catholic University, Washington. The letter said that the recommendation was approved unanimously. The committee took votes on proposals for minima of 40 and 37½ cents, as well as 32½ cents, before agreeing on the 35-cent rate.

International Shoe Co. Head Makes No Comment.

Byron A. Gray, president of the International Shoe Co., said today he was not prepared to make any statement as to how the payroll of the International company, largest in St. Louis, would be affected by approval of the recommendation for a 35-cent minimum hourly wage.

NEGRO REPORTED AS LYNCHED FOUND IN GEORGIA FACTORY

Tuskegee Institute Had Recorded That He Was Victim of White Mob.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 4 (AP).—Charlie Williams, a Negro, whom the Tuskegee Institute listed in its semi-annual report as having been lynched by a group of white men at Woodville, Ga., March 11, was found working at a fertilizer plant here yesterday.

Detective Sergt. E. A. Fitzgerald, who found Williams, said the latter told him: "I heard I was lynched but didn't pay any attention to it because I knew I was living."

An investigation of the alleged lynching, first reported in a Negro newspaper, was made at the request of the Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching. Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames of Atlanta, general field secretary of the Committee on Inter-racial Co-operation, wrote to the Rev. J. O. Taylor, pastor of the Grace Methodist Church here, asking that he investigate.

At Tuskegee, Ala., M. M. Work, statistician, said the Williams lynching was the only one listed for Georgia so far this year. The semi-annual report of the Institute was made July 1.

Henry Koslowski, 15 years old, 1443A Chambers street, suffered a brain concussion last night when he was knocked off his bicycle by an unidentified man at Twentieth and O'Fallon streets.

Mike Parish, seated at his window at 1315 North Twentieth, saw a man get out of a light-colored coach and strike the boy with his fist. Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Koslowski, was unable to tell what had happened. He is in City Hospital.

TWO ON LAUNCH DROWNED Party of Five Swept From Craft by Wave.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Aug. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Bernard Magruder, 40 years old, of Racine, Wis., and Clarence Fechner, automobile dealer of Kenosha, Wis., were drowned yesterday when a wave swept five persons from a launch on Lake Winnebago.

Mrs. Magruder was the wife of the attorney for William Horlick, of the malted milk family. She was a bridge expert.

Floyd Bricknell, who drove the launch, said the five were sitting on the prow when a huge wave tilted the craft and swept them overboard. The boat did not upset.

HORNER VETOES RISE IN OLD-AGE PENSIONS

Declares Approval Would Be Cruel Gesture, as Funds Are Not Available.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP).—Gov. Horner vetoed last night the bill to increase State old age pensions from $30 to $40 a month, asserting funds for the proposed increase were not available.

Dewitt C. Billman, the Governor's legislative adviser, brought the veto message by airplane from Horner's summer retreat at Highland Park to file it with Secretary of State Hughes before the 10-day deadline expired at midnight.

The Governor in his message said he vetoed the measure "with great reluctance" but that the State's treasury could not provide an additional "several millions" for the increase.

He waited until almost the last possible hour to file the message, pending action by a Congressional Committee in Washington on a plan to increase the Federal Government's pension contribution. When informed by Senator Slattery that the Federal action appeared indefinite he filed the veto message. To approve the $40 pension bill without providing additional funds would be "nothing but a senseless and cruel gesture, holding out promises which the State would not fulfill," the message stated.

Apparently anticipating attacks on the veto from Republicans, who dominated the House Committee that drafted the bill, Gov. Horner declared: "I am afraid to hope that all of the aged persons resident in this State will appreciate the reasons compelling my veto of the measure looked to by many of them as providing more adequately for the necessary comforts for their declining years. I can only say to them that I would gladly give my support and approval to a measure which provided what House bill 194 only promises."

The bill that the Governor vetoed made three major changes in the present law. It would: Increase the pension limit to $40 but leave the amount of pension to be based upon need of the pensioner as determined by the Welfare Department.

Establish a $1000 homestead and insurance policy exemption meaning that property up to that amount would not be considered as resources in determining pension need.

Remove the provision of the present law that the State can recover from the estate of a pensioner after his death the full amount of State pension paid to him during life.

HANES THINKS BUSINESS IS ON EVE OF BIG ADVANCE

Under Secretary of Treasury Points to Filing Up of Orders and Low Inventories.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—John W. Hanes, Acting Chief of the Treasury and former Wall Street broker, told reporters yesterday that he believed business was on the eve of "a big step forward."

Under Secretary Hanes, in charge of the Treasury while Secretary Morgenthau is in Europe on a month's vacation, added at a press conference that business conditions looked better by far than they did 30 to 60 days ago.

He said he based his prediction of an important advance on the piling up of forward orders at factories, the low state of merchandise inventories from which orders could be filled, and the "general state of business."

Britain Warns Fleet May Be Sent to Far East

could not protect many of them, he continued.

"I do feel we have a duty to them that we ought to bear in mind and that we ought not, if we can avoid it, put them in greater peril than that in which they now stand."

About 20,000 British subjects are resident in China, nearly all in Japanese-occupied territory. In addition, about 20,000 Britons live in the British crown colony of Hongkong, off the South China coast.

Discusses Tokyo Conference.

Chamberlain then paid a tribute to Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, Ambassador to Japan, "who is carrying on at the present time with great skill, coolness and courage negotiations in extraordinarily difficult circumstances"—the Tokyo conference on the Tientsin dispute and China policy.

Referring to opposition criticism of the formula agreed to by Britain July 22 as a basis for negotiation of the Tientsin dispute, Chamberlain said:

"At any rate this formula has enabled us to discuss the very acute situation in Tientsin and in regard to some parts of the difficulties there it does look as though we should not have any great difficulty in coming to an agreement with the Japanese."

"I say that deliberately because although it is no use coming to an agreement on one point if you cannot reach an agreement on others—because an agreement must be taken as a whole—it does show that those who are conducting these negotiations in Tokyo are by no means so extreme or unreasonable as we have found many of the Japanese in China itself."

Takes Up Points in Negotiations. Chamberlain discussed points which are being discussed in Tokyo.

He said Britain had made it perfectly clear that it was not prepared to settle with Japan alone questions of currency and Chinese silver in the British and French concessions in Tientsin because these were questions which concerned other Powers.

On the question of handing over four alleged Chinese terrorists being held in the British concession at Tientsin, Chamberlain said Japan had submitted evidence of the men's guilt and that this was now under consideration.

The British-Japanese dispute in the North China port originally was precipitated by British refusal to hand over the four Chinese to the Japanese who charged them with being responsible for the murder of a minor customs official.

Question of Denouncing Treaty. Chamberlain asserted Britain had not gone back on its position regarding Japan's military action in China, but there was nothing in any obligation it had undertaken which bound it to denounce its commercial treaty with Japan.

The United States denounced its commercial treaty with Japan July 26.

Chamberlain said "no immediate effect would be produced" if Britain denounced its treaty. He pointed out that the Japanese-British treaty was accompanied by Japanese treaties with some of the dominions and said it would be "outrageous on our part to shut our eyes to the effect denunciation of the treaty might have and do anything about denunciation without first having full agreement of the dominions."

He added that his statement might give the impression that "I am determined that the trade treaty should not be abandoned, but do not let anybody put that interpretation on my words." He continued:

"However our feelings may be expressed by things happening in the Far East, I can assure the House that I share fully the most violent feelings of anyone on that subject."

"I make my blood boil to hear and read some of the things happening there. However those emotions may be aroused in us, let us not forget the liabilities we have already assumed or the position of our fellow countrymen and countrywomen who are already on the spot."

"We Shall Preserve Interests." "I have tried to give the House some sort of indication of considerations which we have to take into consideration in the Far East."

"We shall endeavor in continuing negotiations to preserve to the utmost extent the principles which have hitherto governed our conduct there."

"We shall preserve to the utmost possible extent the interests and fortunes of British subjects there."

"We shall endeavor to show patience and to exercise reasonable moderation, recognizing that behind all these outrageous things there may be some genuine suspicion on the part of Japanese in China of our treatment of them."

"We must not forget there may be even graver and nearer problems to consider in the course of the next few months and we must conserve our forces to meet any emergency which might arise."

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, applauded the United States' intention to end the American Japanese trade treaty, saying he imagined the action partly was in protest against faint-heartedness of the British Government.

"Only by firmness in the East can we make it clear we are going to be firm in the West," he said. Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, retired naval officer, said he hoped isolationists in the United States would not prevent the American Government from taking a firm stand.

John Morgan, Laborite, suggested it would be a "first-class move" if a United States Admiral would be put in charge of a joint British-American fleet co-ordinating Far Eastern military resources.

The twenty-fifth anniversary today of Britain's entry into the World War found the nation in a preparedness period, calm but slightly puzzled by the difference in tone of speeches of two Cabinet Ministers.

The optimistic observation of Sir Thomas Inskip that war "is unlikely" and "the Government has good reason for saying that" was the subject of wide discussion. Many wondered how to reconcile it with Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax's sober assertion that "the next few weeks or months may prove critical."

Most newspapers noted the anniversary of Britain's declaration of war on Germany in 1914 following German refusal to comply with a 24-hour ultimatum to respect Belgium's neutrality and they emphasized Britain's present state of armament.

Comparison of Preparedness. During the year before the World War Britain spent £77,000,000 (currently $382,000,000) on military and naval preparations. Now it is spending that much every six weeks, or £730,000,000 ($3,516,400,000) this year.

In the summer of 1914 it had 247,000 regulars in the army and around 500,000 reserves. Now, with a regular army of 208,000 plus reserves currently engaging in training exercises and new conscripts, Britain has about 1,000,000 men. The navy is about the same now as it was then.

The biggest difference is in the air force. In 1914 Britain had 822 men and 100 serviceable planes. Now it has 120,000 officers and men in the Royal Air Force plus 75,000 reserves. Although exact figures are not made public, the best estimates are that it has 2300 first-line planes out of a total of 5000 and is adding to these at the rate of 800 monthly.

Another big difference is the tremendous civil preparedness program now in effect with 2,000,000 men and women enrolled and under constant training for police, fire and air raid precautions duty in the event of war.

Britain now has a full reserve fleet manned for big maneuvers. The air force, with more than 1300 planes taking part, will stage practices next week and London will be included in a blackout test.

Typical of the British attitude today was the comment by the Daily Mail that comparison of the 1914 with the 1939 state of preparedness "gives us reason for pride and for confidence that this time war may be averted."

Tokyo Doubts Britain Will Send Major Fleet to Far East.

TOKYO, Aug. 4 (AP).—Doubt was expressed in high Japanese naval circles tonight that Britain would send any major fleet to the Far East in view of the critical outlook in Europe.

Commenting on Prime Minister Chamberlain's warning to Japan that a fleet might be sent "in certain circumstances," one officer said:

"Britain might send a few ships as a gesture but it seems highly unlikely that a large portion of the fleet would be allowed so far from home."

U. S. Charting Own Course in Far East, Summer Welles Says.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—Summer Welles, acting Secretary of State, said today the United States would map its own course in the Far East.

A few hours after Prime Minister Chamberlain asserted Britain might send a fleet to the Far East, Welles said there was no understanding between the United States and Great Britain for joint action in the Orient.

This Government's course, Welles stated, may be parallel with that of other nations when the interests are similar or the same, but he emphasized that no decision with regard to collaboration in the Far East has been taken, no conferences are being held and much less is there any understanding. He added that very frequently information was exchanged with other governments.

Welles would not comment specifically on Chamberlain's speech. He said he would see the President privately on State Department matters after today's Cabinet meeting.

American representatives in China, Welles said, are protesting to local Japanese diplomats against additional incidents involving Americans, but he said they were taking the action locally without specific instructions from the State Department.

France Notifies Tokyo of Unity With Britain on China Issues.

PARIS, Aug. 4 (AP).—France stepped into the British-Japanese negotiations on China issues with a notice to Tokyo today that French interests were linked with those of Britain.

The Foreign Ministry disclosed that Charles Arsene Henry, French Ambassador to Tokyo, had called at the Japanese Foreign Office to point out formally the unity of French and British interests in the Orient. He was understood to have expressed French readiness to take part in the British-Japanese talks, converting the Tokyo conference into a three-Power parley.

A similar notice was said to have been given to London, promising that the French Government would take a stand identical with that of Britain.

This was in response to a British inquiry as to France's position concerning deposits of Chinese silver in French and British banks in the British concession at Tientsin. Japan demanded that the silver be turned over to its puppet administration at Peiping. Britain replied it could not act because French interests were involved.

HOUSE SENDS BILL FOR NEW PANAMA LOCKS TO PRESIDENT

It Agrees to Senate Amendments to $277,000,000 Measure.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—The House accepted today Senate amendments to legislation calling for $277,000,000 for a set of new locks at the Panama Canal and sent the measure to President Roosevelt.

One Senate revision would provide that supervisors on the new project must be United States citizens.

JAPAN'S ENVOYS DISCUSS CLOSER TIES WITH AXIS

Ambassadors to Rome and Berlin Lay Groundwork at Lake Como for Coming Negotiations.

SOME OPPOSITION TO MILITARY PACT

Objection Reported in Diplomatic Circles in Tokyo, Although Army Men Favor Alliance.

ROME, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Japanese ambassadors to Rome and Berlin today laid groundwork for extensive military, political and economic discussions to be opened shortly by Japan with Italy and Germany. The official Italian news agency, Stefani, said the Japanese diplomats—Toshio Shiratori from Rome and Lieutenant-General Hiroshi Oshima from Berlin—were talking of Japanese adherence to the Italian-German military alliance which pledges each to come to the other's aid in wartime.

The possibility of increased Japanese collaboration with the axis partners is to be explored with Fascist and Nazi leaders by a Japanese delegation which is due to arrive in Naples Aug. 28.

Leaders of Delegation. Heading the delegation are Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi and Admiral Baron Mineo Osumi, who are to attend the Nazi Nuremberg congress Sept. 2-11 and the Fascist anniversary of the "March on Rome" in October.

Terauchi was replaced Dec. 1 as supreme commander of Japan's war forces in North China and made a member of the Supreme War Council, which in effect is semi-retirement. Osumi, former Navy Minister, also is on the Supreme War Council.

Foreign diplomats thought Germany and Italy would press hard to get Japan into a military alliance. Japanese military circles favor such a line-up, but the diplomats believed other Tokyo leaders might resist on the basis that Germany and Italy could give Japan little assistance in the Far East in event of war.

Stefani said the Ambassadors had "declared the subject of their meeting was the question of the Tokyo Government's adherence to the Italian-German alliance of steel."

"Alliance of steel" is the term used in the Italian and German press to designate the military agreement signed last May. Some foreign observers, however, expressed belief that the meeting was a diplomatic feint.

Mussolini Paper's Comment. A statement that they were considering "eventful closer adherence of Tokyo to the two axis powers" was attributed to Shiratori by Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia.

Il Popolo displayed an interview with Shiratori under a three-column headline—"Important Talks at Villa d'Este."

The envoy's remarks, however, did not specifically commit Japan to adhere to the axis military alliance or even to any new pacts.

Nevertheless, a number of attendant circumstances added credence to the possibility Japan might be ready to go the whole way with its anti-Communism partners.

A basis, in part, for this speculation was the fact the two ambassadors were accompanied by their military attaches.

Significant Site of Meeting. The published statement also referred pointedly to the fact Villa d'Este, site of the drafting of the Italian-German military alliance, had been chosen for its significance.

Those foreign observers who thought they saw concerted action between Japan in China and Germany and Italy in Europe wondered how Tokyo could come "closer" to its anti-Communist partners without some form of military alliance.

Observers inclined to regard the declaration as a bluff pointed to the indefinite word, "eventual."

The Villa d'Este meeting came as a surprise to most foreign observers. Its nature, however, did not altogether surprise diplomats who have been watching closely for Japanese reaction to the stiffening stands of the United States and Britain in the Far East and persistent efforts of the British and French to reach a mutual assistance agreement with Soviet Russia.

"Good Augury for Us." The published statement attributed to the Japanese Ambassador said: "Villa d'Este was not chosen by mere chance for this meeting of ours after those which we have already had in Rome and Berlin."

"It will be recalled that the Italian and German Ministers met here to conclude the agreements fruitful in prosperity and power for the two friendly nations and Japan, all adherents to the anti-Communist pact."

"This is a good augury for us who have now more fully examined the question of an eventual closer adherence of Tokyo to the two axis powers."

military alliance with Germany and Italy because of the United States abrogation of its Japanese trade treaty and British resistance on the North China currency question, a high Government official said today.

Conclusion of a military pact may come at any moment, he said, but he professed ignorance of the meeting of Japanese ambassadors to Italy and Germany, under way at Villa d'Este, Italy, or the subject of the Villa d'Este conference.

The official first said "events" were forcing Japan into an arms alliance with the axis powers and then added that by "events" he meant the July 27 notice from Washington that the United States after six months would cancel the 1911 treaty, and Great Britain's stand on the currency question.

In Tokyo talks designed to settle British-Japanese differences at Tientsin the Japanese have insisted that Britain withdraw support from the Central Chinese Government currency, which the Japanese-sponsored North China Government has outlawed and is attempting to supplant with its own bank notes.

"Obviously," said this Government source, "the two attitudes (American and British) are connected."

"They indicate joint pressure on Japan whether the American and British Governments actually are conferring or not."

"We have been confidentially informed that Washington fears war in Europe in September and the treaty abrogation was done on the spur of the moment in order to clear the way for military assistance to Britain and France while withholding war materials from Japan. As long as the treaty was in existence this would have been legally impossible."

He declared that "about 10 minutes after the news of the abrogation was received in Tokyo," the British attitude in the Tientsin conference changed. Before that time the talks had been progressing smoothly, he said.

"Concerning the currency issue which was the lone major point remaining, the two sides are nowhere near agreement," the Government source said. He said the British had flatly refused to prohibit use of the Central Chinese Government's currency in the Tientsin concession.

"Then naturally the question of entering a formal alliance with Italy and Germany was revived. Events leave Japan little choice. Apparently the United States and Britain are embarked on an open program of attempted frustration of Japan. Therefore the Government must consider closer relations with European Allies."

A conference of the five key Cabinet Ministers—Premier Baron Kichiro Hirayama and the Ministers of War, Navy, Finance and Foreign Affairs—was convened today to discuss the alliance proposal, long sponsored by high army officers and other ultra-nationalists. Meanwhile, about 10,000 persons, most of them children, demonstrated in front of the British Embassy. Marching in a driving rain the throng halted barely five minutes at the front gates, shouting, and then resumed its march.

Only two days ago Ambassador Craigie made a vigorous protest against anti-British agitation, threatening to break off the Tientsin talks unless the movement were put under control.

DETROIT, Aug. 4 (AP).—For ending the month-old General Motors strike, the strikers themselves agreed on early today to ratification by union and the strikers themselves.

If the proposals—which announced officially—are it is considered likely in 1940 automobiles, which delayed by the strike, soon.

At the conclusion of session shortly after James F. Dewey, Federal mediator, announced that the settlement had been reached by the strikers and the UAW.

To speed the settlement, Dewey said the strikers were to be paid a daily allowance of $10 a day and had food and shelter in the strikers' office building.

Strikers to Act Tomorrow. Dewey said the internal executive board of the UAW, which called the strike, would convene this afternoon on the terms. If the board, they will be to the strikers at the 12 plants tomorrow.

Union approval of the Dewey added, would make formal signing by the strikers and the UAW-CIO called for to enforce its demand for a new contract covering tool and die makers, engineers and men.

When they walked out of the new model plant, the UAW-CIO called for to enforce its demand for a new contract covering tool and die makers, engineers and men.

The walkout of 7500 skilled workers ultimately resulted in approximately 150,000 workers as the upshot of the strike.

TERMS FOR ENDING GENERAL MOTORS STRIKE AGREED ON

Settlement Reached, Subject to Ratification by Union Officers and by Strikers Themselves.

DETROIT, Aug. 4 (AP).—Terms for ending the month-old walkout of General Motors skilled workers were agreed on early today, subject to ratification by union officers and the strikers themselves.
If the proposals—which were not announced officially—are approved, it is considered likely that work on 1940 automobiles, which has been delayed by the strike, will begin soon.
At the conclusion of a 10-hour session shortly after midnight, James F. Dewey, Federal Labor mediator, announced an agreement had been reached between the corporation and the CIO United Automobile Workers.
To speed the settlement the conferences dispensed with a dinner recess last night and had food taken to their meeting place in General Motor's office building.

Strikers to Act Tomorrow.
Dewey said the international executive board of the UAW-CIO, which called the strike July 5, would convene this afternoon to vote on the terms. If accepted by the board, they will be submitted to the strikers at the 12 affected plants tomorrow.
Union approval of the settlement,
Dewey added, would make possible formal signing by tomorrow night. He indicated that details of the agreement would not be announced until then.
The UAW-CIO called the strike to enforce its demand for a contract covering tool and die workers, engineers and maintenance men. When they walked out preparations for new model production were stalled.
The walkout of 7500 skilled workers ultimately resulted in idleness of approximately 150,000 production workers as the output of 1939 cars ended and General Motors could not begin producing 1940 models.

Cleveland was the scene of the strike's worst violence, although there were skirmishes in Detroit and lesser disorders at Saginaw, Mich. The strike also affected G.
M. plants in Pontiac and Flint, Mich.
Reported Terms of Agreement.
William S. Knudsen, G. M. president, headed the corporation's negotiators but did not attend all of the sessions. R. J. Thomas, president, led the UAW-CIO conferees and Philip Murray, CIO vice-president, also attended some of the earlier discussions.
Terms of the agreement, as reported unofficially and lacking confirmation, included:
General Motors would provide more employment for tool and die workers in its own plants by having less of it done in the independent factories.
The corporation denied the union's demand for a 10-cent hourly wage increase for skilled workers and for placing union labels on all dies.
The management would recognize UAW-CIO Grievance Committees in plants where no other union claimed bargaining rights. Pending settlement of claims between rival unions in other plants, collective bargaining would be "frozen."
The corporation already has asked the National Labor Relations Board to conduct an election to determine which union should be recognized in cases where both the UAW-CIO and the A. F. of L.
United Automobile Workers claim such rights.

Court Forbids CIO Picketing of Saginaw Plant.
SAGINAW, Mich., Aug. 4 (AP).—
Circuit Judge William H. Martin issued today a temporary injunction restraining the United Automobile Workers (CIO) from picketing the Saginaw steering gear plant or molesting its employees.
The sweeping mandatory order, effective at midnight, was read to a group of 20 pickets by Sheriff Hugo
A. Muehlenbeck. The pickets made no comment. Later they dispersed.
The injunction was issued on petition of Alva W. Phelps, manager of the plant, which is a division of General Motors Corporation.
The order provides for $10,000 penalty. It enjoins not only the plant but on their way to and from the plant and at their homes.

NLRB Orders Delco-Remy to Stop Recognizing Independent Union.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—
The National Labor Relations Board ordered the Delco-Remy Corporation today to cease recognition of the Delco-Remy Employees' Association, affiliated with the National Independent Unions of America, as the collective bargaining representative at its plants in Anderson, Ind.
The board also directed the company to instruct its employees "that physical assaults or threats or threats of physical violence directed at discouraging membership" in the CIO union will not be permitted in the plant and the employees "without express authorization from the respondent (company), may not make or carry blackjacks or other dangerous weapons."

OFFICIAL TELLS LOUISIANANS
NOT TO BE AFRAID TO TALK Says Person With Information for Federal Agents Need Fear
No Longer
NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 4 (AP).—
Assistant Attorney-General John Rogge called on Louisianans last night to cast off a deep-rooted "fear complex" and talk freely to Federal agents investigating political misconduct in the State.
"We are getting a lot of information through anonymous letters," the Washington official said,
"but a great many people still seem afraid to speak out for fear of retaliation. We know what they are afraid of, and what they have been afraid of in the past, but they need hold those fears no longer."
A Federal grand jury has been questioning scores of witnesses, ranging from former Gov. Leche through day laborers, since it turned its attention to State affairs a month ago. Indications are the next indictments will deal with Federal oil laws.

TROOPS OCCUPY STRIKE AREA IN COLORADO

Guardsmen Disarm Officers and Citizens at Site Where 7 Persons Were Wounded.

GREEN MOUNTAIN DAM, Colo.,
Aug. 4 (AP).—National Guardsmen patrolled the Green Mountain Dam site today while Federal and State officials investigated strike violence that union spokesmen attributed to "unauthorized vigi-lantes."
Adjutant-General Harold H. Richardson of the Colorado National Guard, who occupied the dam site yesterday on orders to put down a "state of insurrection" after seven men were wounded, extended the military occupation last night to the town of Kremmling, Colo. The small ranching community is 18 miles north of the $4,000,000 dam and tunnel project on the Blue River.
Thomas J. Morrissey, United States District Attorney, announced in Denver the Department of Justice requested "him to obtain full information on the strike, called July 12 by five American Federation of Labor unions at the Reclamation Bureau project. They sought recognition of collective bargaining agents. The Labor Department fixed wages.
The "back to work" forces broke through a union picket line Tuesday night. Six men were shot and one cut in ensuing clashes Wednesday, and Gov. Ralph L. Carr declared a "state of insurrection" existed. The seven injured are recovering.
James A. Brownlow, Colorado State Federation of Labor secretary, sent telegrams to President Roosevelt and others protesting that an "armed mob of unauthorized vigi-lantes from an adjoining county have at the point of arms taken over the Federal Green Mountain project of the Department of the Interior where a peaceful strike against a private contractor is in progress."
Night Marshal Chauncey Van Pelt said the citizens, when disarmed, were "following me, ready to back me up" while he investigated a report union men threatened to kill two Kremmling business men. Richardson reported taking 15 firearms from the group.
"They were some fellows I deputized," Van Pelt said.
"Any man who wants to can go back to work," the guard commandant announced.
The Green Mountain project is a unit of the $44,000 Colorado River-Big Thompson Water Division project sponsored by the Northern Colorado Conservancy District which has indicated it preferred an open shop on the construction.

SUIT SETTLEMENT DISCLOSED
Attorney for Principal Beneficiary Says Nominal Sums Were Paid to Two Contestants.

Settlement of a suit contesting
the will of Jeremiah Montgomery, a stationary engineer, who died in 1935 leaving an estate estimated at $10,000, was disclosed yesterday when the will was upheld formally by Circuit Judge Robert L. Aronson.
The suit was settled by payment of nominal sums to the contestants,
Joseph B. Montgomery and Mrs.
Florence Schmidt, adopted children of Montgomery, it was said by Frank Coffman, attorney for another adopted child, Earl Clarend Montgomery, 529 Fillmore street, who was principal beneficiary under the will.

U. S. APPELLATE COURT REBUKES JUDGE REEVES

Says His Charge to Jury in Mail Fraud Case Was "Clearly Prejudicial."

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in an opinion filed here yesterday, criticizes the judicial conduct of United States District Judge Albert L. Reeves of Kansas City in a mail fraud trial there last September, holding his charge to the jury was "argumentative and clearly prejudicial." Conviction of A. J. Boatright and W. R. Foreman, both of Kansas City, is reversed and the case remanded for a new trial.
In its opinion, written by Judge Archibald K. Gardner, the appellate court observes that although a Federal Judge may sum up the evidence for a jury in a criminal case, he may not abuse the power and in summing up he must analyze evidence for both sides.

In undertaking to review what were designated uncontested facts the trial court made no mention of evidence in the record favorable to contentions of the defendants, the opinion says. It adds that the charge to the jury was replete with repetitions favorable to the Government's case.
"The charge impresses us as being argumentative throughout," the opinion goes on. "In fact, we can conceive of no more effective argument for the Government than that which characterizes the charge in this case. The Judge narrated matterial and important facts testified to by Government witnesses and wove them into an argument that was clearly prejudicial."
However, the opinion adds that the indictment as drawn no doubt made it difficult for the trial court to make a clear and succinct statement of essential ingredients of the offense charged. Judges John B.
Sanborn and Joseph W. Woodrugh concurred in the opinion.
Boatright and Foreman were sentenced to five years in prison on mail fraud charges in connection with their promotion of a plan to sell display racks for packaged nut meats. Evidence was given that they obtained $1850 on an order to deliver 200 racks to a purchaser in Philadelphia, with whom there was correspondence by mail, but that only 50 racks were delivered.

Carving Displayed Upside Down.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4 (AP).
—After considerable study by the sculpture experts of the Fine Arts Palace at the Golden Gate International Exposition Naum Gabo's little carving was placed in the palace and a picture sent to Gabo in London. Came a cablegram:
"My work is upside down." The sculpture was removed to the director's office "until we learn just how it should be set up."

Motor of Record-Breaking Plane Over Springfield (Ill.)
Airport Growing Noisier.
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP).
—The motor of the Moody brothers' endurance plane droned on today as the flyers completed their twelfth day in the air.
At 3 p. m. they had been aloft continuously 288 hours and neither Hunter nor Humphrey Moody had indicated what the probable limit of their endurance would be.
Cheered by a mass visit of 300 neighbors from their Dalton City (Ill.) birthplace yesterday and receipt of hundreds of telegrams, the Moody continued to circle close to the airport in their small aluminumcolored monoplane, Miss Springfield.
Hunter Moody, the veteran aviator of the pair, held several short-wave-radio conversations with the flight manager, Leroy Murphy about performance of the ship's 55-horse-power motor. The motor sounded a little noisier than when the brothers took off a week ago last Sunday, but Murphy said it hadn't "missed a beat."
The former world light plane endurance record was 218 hours. The heavy plane record is 653 hours.

Sunkel Removed After Prothro's Men Score Twice on Wild Pitches

By J. Roy Stockton
SPORTSMAN'S PARK, Aug. 4.—Tom Sunkel, southpaw star of the Southern Association last year, tried for his fourth victory as a Cardinal this afternoon, pitching against the Phillies in the first game of a series of four. Walter Beck, a veteran right-hander, who has won 14 games in recent years, was on the hill for the visitors.

The Phillies took the field with Morrie Aronovich on the bench, Manager Doc Prothro having taken the manager out of the lineup because of a batting slump dating back to the All-Star game.

Manager Ray Blades, who has kept himself in the background while directing the Cardinals from the dugout, coached at the first base line in the first inning, and as far as this observer knew, it was his first appearance of the season at that capacity.

About 1500 persons attended. Reardon, Dunn and Pinelli were the umpires.

FIRST—PHILLIES—Scharein struck out. Scott singled to center. Brack filed to Moore. Suhr filed to Owen.

CARDINALS—Brown fouled to Scharein. Hughes threw out S. Martin. Slaughter filed to Marty. SECOND—PHILLIES—Marty walked. Mueller singled to left. Suhr stopping at second. Hughes fouled to a sacrifice and was safe. Guteridge's fumble, filling the bases. Marty scored and the other runners advanced on a wild pitch. S. Martin made a good running catch of Miller's pop fly. Mueller scored and Hughes went to third. Beck's sacrifice fly to Slaughter. Scharein doubled to center, scoring Hughes. Brown threw out Scott. THREE RUNS.

CARDINALS—Mize popped to Suhr. Medwick filed to Marty. Slaughter popped to Hughes. THIRD—PHILLIES—Brack reached third on Guteridge's low throw. S. Martin threw out Suhr. Brack scored on a wild pitch. S. Martin threw out Marty. Mueller was called out on strikes. ONE RUN.

CARDINALS—Moore struck out. S. Martin. Davis batted for Sunkel and singled to right for the first hit off Beck. Cooper ran for Davis. Brown singled to center, Cooper stopping at second. S. Martin grounded to Suhr.

SHUFFLE OFF TO BUFFALO ROUSES
JIMMY WEBB'S IRE
NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP).—Shortstop Jimmy (Skeeter) Webb expressed dissatisfaction today over the deal that sends him to Buffalo and option and brings the International League club's keystone connection, Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack, to Cleveland.

Webb said he hadn't made up his mind yet whether he would report to the Bisons, and accused the Cleveland front office of ingratitude and a "rotten deal."

"I signed with Cleveland when I was a minor league club and they sent me to Buffalo," Webb said. "I was with the Indians for a long time and they sent me to Meridian, Miss. I played game after game this season when my knee was so sore that I knew I was jeopardizing my entire career—and the gratitude the club shows is a rotten deal like this."

Webb said he would return to Cleveland with the Indians Monday and the day the deal becomes effective with Mack and Boudreau reporting to the night game against the St. Louis Browns—and would confer with club officials before deciding whether to go to Buffalo.

INDIANS HIT THREE HOME RUNS BUT YANKEES DO MORE SCORING
NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP).—Three of the five hits the Cleveland Indians got off Oral Hidebrand and Marlin Russo today were home runs, but these weren't enough to offset a 12-hit barrage which the world champion Yankees laid down for a 5 to 4 victory in the first game of their series.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 4 (AP).—S. W. (Young) Allen of Macon put on pressure last night in the last two rounds of a 10-round heavyweight bout with Cleveland's Johnny Risko and gained a decision, Allen weighed 182, Risko 190.

RIGGS DEFEATS KAMRATH AFTER LOSING 2 SETS

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—Bobby Riggs of Chicago, rallied after losing the first two sets and defeated Bob Kamrath of Austin, Tex., 4-6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, to gain the final round of the forty-ninth annual Meadow Club invitation tournament today.

Kamrath played a fine game from the baseline early in the match, but his advances to the net invariably proved costly. Riggs' usual effective retrieving game was below form in the sets he yielded, but otherwise it was Kamrath's placements from back-court that enabled the blond Texan to take the early advantage.

Kamrath started the third set in indifferent fashion and it was obvious that he intended to donate it to Riggs.

In the final two sets, Kamrath was completely outplayed. Riggs had such good control of his strokes in the fifth set he found time to experiment with tricky trap shots and fast drops.

Don McNeill of Oklahoma City, Ok., and Frankie Parker, Beverly Hills, Cal., won a five-set struggle from Russell Bobbitt of Atlanta and Frank Guernsey of Orlando, Fla., 6-2, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2, enter the final of the doubles.

Guernsey and Bobbitt prolonged the encounter by continually playing to McNeill, and Don's errors from all parts of the court handed the Southern combination plenty of points.

Parker, however, added a new sparkle to his unusual steadiness and he alone carried the brunt of the battle for the two, playing the ball deep along the sidelines and lining medium-high lobs to the baseline.

Joe Sprinz Suffers Broken Jaw Trying To Catch Baseball Dropped From Blimp

Joe Sprinz, veteran St. Louis catcher with the San Francisco Seals, tried to set a record yesterday by catching a ball dropped from a dirigible 800 feet up. The force of the ball drove Sprinz's gloved hand against his face, knocking him out and fracturing his jaw. He is shown on the ground just after the mishap.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4 (AP).—An attempt to set a new record for catching a baseball dropped from a great height cost Joe Sprinz of St. Louis, veteran catcher for the Pacific Coast League San Francisco Seals, a compound jaw fracture, the loss of eight teeth and ragged lacerations of both lips.

A celebration of baseball day at the Golden Gate Exposition yesterday, five baseballs were dropped 800 feet from a blimp cruising over Treasure Island.

Four balls fell out of range. Sprinz circled under the fifth and held his glove up. The ball struck the glove with terrific force, and the glove smashed against his face. He dropped to the ground in great pain and failed to hang onto the baseball.

Sprinz will be out of baseball a month or more, and must undergo extensive treatment for the restoration of his mouth and jaws.

"That is the end of that kind of stunt for my ball players," said Charley Graham, Seals president. It was estimated the ball was traveling 150 miles an hour as it came to earth.

The record catch of 758 feet was made from the top of Terminal Tower in Cleveland.

Sprinz, the son of Joseph Sprinz of 7603 Vermont avenue and a native of St. Louis, has been making his home in recent years in San Francisco, the home of his wife.

Where Are Our Net Pros?
PROFESSIONAL tennis in this country has worn out its welcome, for the time being. The big guns have been peddling their show abroad.

Last winter, the pro "circus" had a really fine assortment to offer fans, with Don Budge facing all the "agitation" about the tour. Neither finished robustly, as to finances, and the impression grew that the bottom is about out of this sort of attraction.

For one reason, the novelty of the show has worn off, and there will be no worth-while new material to send to the wars, unless they bring over some European player of outstanding merit. Our American singles graduates of the coming campaign will hardly all the "agitation" about the King-Medwick incident seems to have helped the Cardinals. For Manager Blades and Outfielder Medwick yesterday shook hands as they posed for photographers. Blades and Medwick discussed Sarajevo, and undoubtedly there is and will be a better understanding between Blades and Medwick than has existed previously.

Fans See Manager.
Perhaps, like the characters in the movie skits, it was "purely coincidental," but there was another novelty during the double-header with the Bees. When it seemed that Morton Cooper might be faltering in the ninth inning of the second game, Blades, usually the "Invisible Ray," personally emerged from the dugout, walked to the mound and investigated the situation. Almost without exception in previous games, Coach Miguel Angel Gonzalez has done the emerging. It was good to see Blades on the field. He has done an excellent job with the Cardinals and it is not necessary for him to be so self-effacing. When he decided that Cooper had something in reserve and deserved the chance to pitch out of the jam, the customers liked the decision and applauded it.

The Medwick Case.
TAMPERING with another owner's playing assets is serious business. It caused one of the most serious rows in the history of the American League.

That case developed over the alleged malfeasance of Pitcher Carl Mays, then with the Boston Red Sox, whose owner was heavily in debt to Jake Ruppert of the Yankees. President Ban Johnson believed Mays was playing for his release. Mays was suspended, and while under suspension was transferred to the New York Yankees.

Then developed the famous fight between Frazee, Ruppert and Johnson's enemy, Charles Comiskey, on one side and Johnson defending the integrity of league transfers as he saw it, on the other. Johnson believed to the end that Frazee and Ruppert were in collusion to defeat his attempt to punish Mays.

The case was one of the few baseball arguments to find its way into court. A temporary injunction restraining action by Johnson was issued, but an attorney believed Mays was playing for his release. Mays was suspended, and while under suspension was transferred to the New York Yankees.

CLIFT HITS A HOME RUN; GLENN AND SIEBERT ALSO BAT RUNS ACROSS PLATE

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 4.—The Browns broke a four-game losing streak by defeating the Philadelphia Athletics here this afternoon in the opener of a series of four contests. It was the third triumph for the men of Fred Haney against six reverses on their current trip.

The score was 3 to 1.
Bill Trotter, making his first start in several weeks, pitched for the Browns and Robert Joyce worked for the Athletics.

Joe Grace played center field for the Browns and batted second and Moose Solters again was in left and hit in the clean-up position.

The bad weather held down the attendance to about 500.

Basal and Pippas were the umpires.

FIRST—BROWNS—Lodigiani threw out Heffner. Grace singled to center. McQuinn filed to Moses. Nagel threw out Solters.

ATHLETICS—Moses singled to right. Siebert doubled to left, scoring Moses. Johnson filed to Solters. Hayes fouled to Heffner. Chapman filed to Solters. ONE RUN.

SECOND—BROWNS—Clift doubled to left. Lodigiani threw out Hoag. Clift, holding second, Glenn walked. Berardino fouled to Lodigiani. Trotter was called out on strikes.

ATHLETICS—Nagel singled to left. Newsome popped to Trotter. Clift threw out Lodigiani. Heffner fouled to Siebert. Grace singled to right. McQuinn popped to Siebert. Solters forced Grace, Newsome to Nagel.

ATHLETICS—Moses lined to Hoag. Siebert rolled out. McQuinn. Grace doubled. Trotter. Johnson singled to left. Hayes filed to Grace.

FOURTH—BROWNS—Johnson made a great catch of Clift's low liner. Joyce threw out Hoag. Glenn grounded out to Siebert unassisted.

ATHLETICS—Chapman struck out. Nagel was out. Heffner to McQuinn. Newsome singled to center. Berardino threw out Lodigiani.

FIFTH—BROWNS—Berardino singled to center. Trotter sacrificed. Joyce to Nagel, who covered first. Heffner filed to Moses. Berardino taking third after the catch. Grace fouled to Lodigiani.

ATHLETICS—Joyce struck out. Moses doubled to center. Berardino threw out Siebert. Moses moving to third. Johnson filed to Grace.

SIXTH—BROWNS—McQuinn walked. Solters struck out. Clift walked. Hoag popped to Newsome. Glenn singled to right, scoring McQuinn and sending Clift to third. Berardino filed to Moses. ONE RUN.

ATHLETICS—Trotter threw out Hayes. Chapman struck out. Clift made a nice play to throw out Nagel.

SEVENTH—BROWNS—Trotter struck out. Heffner singled to center. Grace doubled. Trotter. Johnson hit his third hit. Heffner stopping at third. McQuinn popped to Lodigiani. Solters struck out.

ATHLETICS—Newsome walked. Lodigiani hit into a double play. Heffner to Berardino to McQuinn. Joyce filed to Grace.

EIGHTH—BROWNS—Clift hit his ninth home run of the season into the left-field stands. Hoag lined to Johnson. Glenn singled to center. Berardino singled to center. Glenn stopping at second. Trotter walked, filling the bases. Heffner sent a short fly to Johnson. Moses made a great catch of Grace's liner. ONE RUN.

ATHLETICS—Moses filed to Hoag. Siebert rolled out to McQuinn. Johnson rolled to Glenn. NINTH—BROWNS—Nagel booted McQuinn's grounder. McQuinn reaching first safely. Solters hit to Joyce, who threw to Newsome in an effort to start a double play, but both runners were safe when Newsome dropped the ball. Clift sacrificed. Joyce to Siebert. Hoag was intentionally passed, filling the bases. Glenn filed to Johnson. McQuinn scoring and Solters reaching third after the catch. Berardino filed to Moses. ONE RUN.

ATHLETICS—Hayes singled to center. Dean batted for Chapman and forced Hayes. Heffner unassisted. Collins ran for Dean. Gantenbein batted for Nagel and filed to Grace. Miles batted for Newsome and forced Collins, McQuinn to Heffner.

FOUR RECORDS FALL, ONE TIED IN MUNY SWIMMING MEET

SHAW PARK IS TEAM WINNER IN CARNIVAL

12-Year-Old Girl and 15-Year-Old Boy Establish Two of New Standards at Marquette Pool.

By Harold Tuthill

Swimming is one sport in which youth cannot, or won't, be denied. The twenty-fifth annual Municipal Athletic Association meet held last night at Marquette Pool before a crowd of 607 paid served only to emphasize this fact.

A week ago observers at the women's National A. A. U. swimming championships at Des Moines were astounded when Nancy Merkl, a 13-year-old Portland (Ore.) girl, set a record in the meet. In the Muny meet a 12-year-old girl and a 15-year-old boy broke records which had stood for some time.

Lorraine Jekel, an eighth grade parochial school student, Wednesday night set a record of 31.5 seconds in the Class C girls' 50-yard free style, breaking Jacky Dennison's mark of 33.8 seconds made in 1936 by 2.3 seconds. Miss Jekel, a Marquette representative, did not win last night but her record will stand.

The 15-year-old boy is Walter Deppe, who will be a sophomore when he returns to Solder High School next month, but already he is a champion and record-breaker.

Son of Former Lifeguard

A son of a former lifeguard, Frank George Deppe, young Walter has been swimming only five years. Walter gave the Muny a fling three years ago, fared badly and decided to lay off until he had improved.

He swam in six events in the finals, three of them being relays. He was on two winning relay teams, one of them setting a record, was second in the Class A men's 100-yard free style event, third in the 440 to Rene Chouteau and Charles (Chuck) Flachmann, and he also swam on a relay team which finished third.

Young Deppe won the State interscholastic 220-yard championship and finished second in the city interscholastic meet last spring. In addition, he also won the State Y. M. C. A. 220-yard free style title. So the fact that he broke the 50-yard free-style Muny mark again in the final was not so astonishing. In the preliminaries, he was clocked in 27.5 and in the final in 27.4. Both marks were better than the 27.8 seconds by J. Beffa of the Lorelei Pool in 1932.

Some More New Records

A teammate of Deppe's, Ed Espenschied, 16 years old, accounted for another record in the finals. He swam the 100-yard backstroke in 1:46.1 to break Carl Classen's mark set last year by 1.5 seconds. The third individual mark to go by the boards in the finals was that established by Lee Clauss, of the Downtown Y., a boy 15 years old. Swimming in the Class B 50-yard breaststroke event, Clauss was clocked in 34.4 seconds, which broke Bill Roberts' mark of 37.6 seconds in 1933. However, Clauss' time of 33.8 seconds recorded in the preliminaries will be accepted as the new record.

Rene Chouteau, who, as a Yale sophomore this fall, will be eligible for varsity competition, won the men's 100-yard and 440-yard free style events, beating Deppe in one and Charley Flachmann in the other. In the "100," Rene's time was 59.7 seconds, which tied the mark set by Dave Bartosch, of Marquette, in 1934.

Coach Steve Nelson's well-balanced Shaw Park squad of boys and girls took team honors with 91 points, and nosed out the North Side Y. for men's honors, 49 points to 48. The Women's Swimming Association took the trophy for the girls' classification, registering 51 points to 42 for Shaw Park. The Juniors, with 33 points, finished fourth.

Eight events were on the program for the first time and the marks established will stand as records. The events were the Class B girls' 50-yard breaststroke, Class A men's 100-yard backstroke, Class A women's 100-yard breaststroke, lifeguard 100-yard backstroke, Class A women's 100-yard backstroke, Class B girls' 50-yard backstroke, Class A women's 200-yard relay and lifeguard 100-yard breaststroke.

The recapitulation shows that four old marks were broken and one tied in the finals. Counting the eight records for the new events, that makes a total of 12 new marks for next year's contestants to shoot at.

Karl O. Bauer, president of the Ozark A. A. U., said that he saw no Olympic possibilities in the meet.

Jim Counsilman, the Downtown Y.'s 15-year-old representative, won the 200-yard breaststroke and swam on the relay team.

DEHNER NAMED EAST ST. LOUIS BASKET COACH

Louis (Pic) Dehner, all-America basketball star who graduated from the University of Illinois last spring, has been named head basketball coach at East St. Louis High School, according to an announcement by school officials today.

Wirt Downing, assistant football coach to Jack Nolen, who has been ill, was promoted to head coach and also will be in charge of wrestling and track. Nolen will be relieved of his duties, but retained on the school's payroll.

Frank Ficke comes from Clark Junior High, East St. Louis, to be assistant football coach. He will be replaced at Clark by Thomas Sheehy, East St. Louis youth who played football at Kirkville Teachers' College.

18 SECOND KAYO IS FEATURE OF C.M.T.C. BOUTS

It took 18-year-old Don Pinnow of Freeport, Ill., only 18 seconds to gain his first heavyweight title. A few left jabs and then a hard right to Adolph Lauterbach's jaw sent the latter to the floor thereby ending last night's final C. M. T. C. boxing program at Jefferson Barracks. About 8000 attended.

Pinnow, who recently graduated from high school and hopes to receive a West Point appointment, proved one of the best all-around athletes during this year's C. M. T. C. encampment at the Barracks. He also starred in track and swimming. Pinnow represented Company A.

The lightweight title went to John Buttry of Illinois, who gained a three-round decision over Horace Berend of Hermann, Mo. Buttry sent Berend to the floor for five short counts.

The welterweight bout between Arthur Fred of Waltonville, Ill., Second Machine Gun Company, and Thomas Root of Marissa, Ill., Company H, proved humorous. Fred, shorter than his opponent, used football tactics to push Root into the ropes, but the latter however, managed to get in quite a few damaging blows to gain the decision after the three rounds.

Medical officials stopped the fight between Charles Dalley, of Downer Groves, Ill., Company H, and Harold Reiterman of Mount Pulaski, Ill., Second Machine Gun Company in the middleweight class. The boys did some high-powered slugging for two rounds to a comparatively even draw. Dalley then gave his opponent's nose a terrific beating. The officials thought that Reiterman's nose was seriously injured, but a checkup proved otherwise. It was a technical kayo for Dalley.

Bob Anderson of Cape Girardeau, Mo., Company B lightweight, rushed his opponent for 37 seconds and during that time meted out enough punches to cause the seconds of Elbridge A. Goodhue, Rolla, Mo., Company A, to throw an army raincoat into the ring to halt the fight.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

FLYWEIGHT—John Regis of Royalton, Ill. (112), Company H, defeated Jesse Smith of Metropolis, Ill. (111), Company H, decision.

BANTAMWEIGHT—Nolan M. Pige of Mount Vernon, Ill. (119), Company G, defeated Dela Wells of Benton, Mo. (116), Company B, decision.

FEATHERWEIGHT—Thomas Root of Marissa, Ill. (126), Company H, defeated Arthur Fred of Waltonville, Ill. (129), Second Machine Gun Company, decision.

LIGHTWEIGHT—Bob Anderson of Cape Girardeau, Mo. (135), Company B, defeated Elbridge A. Goodhue of Rolla, Mo. (130), Company A, technical kayo.

WELTERWEIGHT—Willie Tolison of Relevance, Mo. (145), Company A, defeated Joe Isarelli of Chicago, Ill. (143), Company G, decision.

MIDDLEWEIGHT—Charles Dalley of Downer Groves, Ill. (150), Company H, defeated Harold Reiterman of Mount Pulaski, Ill. (149), Second Machine Gun Company, technical kayo.

LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT—John Buttry of Illinois, Mo. (167), Company A, defeated Horace Berend of Hermann, Mo. (166), Company B, decision.

HEAVYWEIGHT—Don Pinnow of Freeport, Ill. (182), Company A, defeated Adolph Lauterbach of Freeport, Ill. (181), Company B, decision.

OFFICIALS—Referee, Sgt. Stone and Sgt. Manuel Flanagan; Clerk, Corporal Henderson; Judges, Sgt. Corothers and Capt. Haughey.

Coming Up.

Another St. Louis "son" has made the grade. Bobby Byrne Jr. has been signed by Cincinnati as a utility infielder.

Count that day lost when some one's rising son. A major league career has not begun.

Bobby Byrne Sr. was a good third baseman when adequate guardians of the hot corner were as scarce as Democrats in Vermont. Any scout who could track down a good third baseman was considered the Daniel Boone of his profession.

For that matter the good third basemen if placed end to end right now wouldn't reach from home plate to the flagpole.

The paid up patronage at the Brown-Washington game in Washington Wednesday was 500. Whose move is it now?

Few customers at present are so few. When Congress is adjourned, what will they do? Should better times for them be not in store?

The Senators might move to Baltimore.

If Dame Rumor doesn't quit moving her eyebrows, those rugged individualists won't know whether they are playing checkers or baseball. We, too, have wondered.

The Cincinnati Reds may say "Uncle" to the Giants but they have so many "cousins" cluttering up the league that all they have to worry about is how they are going to get 100,000 people into 30,000 seats.

The Cardinals used to have the same problem before the Gas-house Gang went out of the heating business and began to cool off.

Atley Donald, with 12 straight games under his belt, fell by the wayside Wednesday, a victim of the pernicious "13," the bane of so many promising streaks.

UT 12 and 1 is not so bad. Especially for a first-year lad. So cheer up, Atley, don't despair—Buck up and go right on from there.

Good Ol' Rog.

See where Rogers Hornsby has been made defendant in a $100,000 damage suit in Baltimore. What said the Rajah was slipping?

Julius Solters, traded to the Indians by the Browns in 1937, is back with the Bronx. They come and they goes and vice versa.

You'll find things about as usual, Julius, except that the cellar has been cleaned and renovated and a cooling system installed. Just one big happy family of rugged individualists.

DEL MAR, Cal., Aug. 4 (AP)—Fresh from victory in a $3000 stake at Hollywood Park, Carmenita scored again yesterday and won the featured sixth race. The filly came within a fifth of a second of equalling the local track record for five and one-half furlongs, romping the distance in 1:08.4-5 to pay $7.60 to win. Big Ben, the champion, paid $3.80 and $3.

INQUIRY ORDERED IN KILLING OF FARMER, WOUNDING OF SON

Coroner at Carlinville, Ill., Calls Inquest in Death Reported as Suicide.

CARLINVILLE, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP).—Macoupin County Coroner James McBrien today said he was investigating the reported suicide of Charles Lewis, 66 years old, a farmer living near here, and the wounding of his son, Ernest, 20, who was hit with a buckshot charge.

McBrien said Ernest Lewis asserted he had fled from the farm home after he was awakened by the gun blast which wounded him early yesterday.

Later in the day, Charles Lewis older son, Walter, 33, found the father's body behind the house, his throat slashed and shot in the head. A shotgun was beside the body.

Ernest Lewis' injuries were said by the coroner not to be serious. An inquest was scheduled for tomorrow afternoon.

18TH CHILD FOR WOMAN, 38

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—Thirty-eight-year-old Mrs. Pearl Darling said today her twin son and daughter, her seventeenth and eighteenth children.

She arrived at the hospital 15 minutes before the children were born last night. Her husband, 60, drove her in a truck from their Cleveland (N. Y.), home, 15 miles away.

BRIDGES ADMITS SEEKING RED AID IN 1934 STRIKE

He Tells Deportation Hearing He Sought Help of All Groups According to What They Could Do.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4 (AP).—Harry Bridges, the West coast CIO maritime leader, whom the Government seeks to deport, contending the native Australian is a Communist, testified today he sought the support of the Communist party, along with other groups, "possibly 10 times, maybe more," during the 1934 general strike here.

"What your action in the 1934 strike dictated by reason of your membership in the Communist party or by reason of your membership in the International Longshoremen's Association?" asked Thomas B. Shoemaker, chief of Government counsel.

"It was dictated solely by membership in my union," Bridges answered.

Shoemaker inquired whether Bridges had solicited Communist help.

"We solicited everyone's help, with an eye to each man's ability to perform a particular job," Bridges said.

"How many times did you seek the aid of the Communist party itself?" Shoemaker persisted.

"Possibly 10 times, maybe more," Bridges replied.

Favors Inheritance Tax. Under questioning by Examiner James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard Law School, Bridges said he favored a heavy inheritance tax.

"If a man could earn $100,000 legally in a year, should he be allowed to keep it?" Landis inquired.

"Yes, but I believe it is hard for a man to earn $100,000 a year legally," Bridges answered.

Shoemaker read from Lenin and asked whether Bridges agreed that all form of democratic government should be wiped from the face of the earth.

"As far as wiping off the face of the earth all forms of democratic government, even republican government, with that I definitely disagree," Bridges said.

Asked for his definition of "bourgeoisie," Bridges said to him it meant the vested industrial interests, the trusts and persons like Henry Ford, Morgan and Tom Girdler—and I separate them from the store keepers, the small business people and professional people."

Shoemaker indicated he was through with questioning Bridges.

Overthrow of Government. Bridges testified yesterday that he did not know whether the Communist party advocates overthrow of the United States Government by violence.

Names Anti-Labor Groups. Bridges named organizations which, in his opinion, are anti-labor. He named the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Associated Farmers, the National Association of Manufacturers, Southern California, Inc., and the Employers Council of San Francisco. He added that some police departments were anti-labor, although he thought individual police officers generally were not.

He declared he never had classified the American Legion as anti-labor "as an organization."

"But in my opinion there is no democracy in the American Legion," he continued. "The officers of the American Legion are one of the greatest threats of democracy and civil liberties that I know of, in my opinion."

Bridges also classified the Immigration service in Oregon and Washington as anti-labor.

Bridges declared that a "class struggle" was under way in the United States and "workers are being shot down on picket lines all over the country."

Small Farmer Eliminated. Bridges declared the small farmer had been virtually eliminated and 90 per cent of the farms in California were owned by large banker-farmer corporations. He continued:

"It's not the labor unions that are hurting the corner grocery man and the drug store man. When the working men get good wages the small business man prospers. The thing that is hurting them is the chain stores, chain drug stores and chain grocery stores, all open shop and non-union, and cutting rates on the small business man."

"When they succeed in monopolizing everything, I don't know what is to be the outcome. You'll have 30,000,000 people on relief. When it comes to feeding them the employers will say it's none of their business."

"Well, it's our business in the trade unions. The only thing I see to do now is to organize trade unions and we'll head off a little of it."

WRITER ENTERS SENATE RACE. Charles Francis Coe to Go Into Florida Democratic Primary.

PARIS, Aug. 4 (AP).—Charles Francis Coe, American writer widely known for his stories of the gangster era, announced last night his candidacy for the United States Senate from Florida.

Coe, known as "Socker" to many American readers and radio listeners, said he would enter the primaries next May for the seat now held by Senator Charles O. Andrews, Democrat. He said he would run on the Democratic ticket but as an anti-New Deal man.

FARMER SHOT; ANOTHER SAYS HE GOT TOO CLOSE TO HOG PEN

Negro, in Hospital, Asserts He Was Merely Looking for His Mule.

William Thomas, Negro farmer of South Kinloch Park, is in County Hospital suffering from 35 shot-gun-pellet wounds inflicted by a neighbor, Levy Edwards, Negro, who told police, "I saw somebody gum-shoeing around too close to my hog pen."

Thomas said he was awakened at 2 a. m. by his son, who told him the mule had broken out of the barn. While they were looking for it, he said, he heard a loud blast and felt a stinging sensation from his ankles to his shoulders. Edwards is in the county jail, charged with assault. Thomas' condition is not serious.

GIRL, PULLED UNDER WATER TWICE, GETS BOY TO SHORE

14-Year-Old School Child Saves Lad, 6, When He Falls Off Brooklyn Pier.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP).—Lucy Bertucci, a 14-year-old school girl, swimming off a Brooklyn pier yesterday, saved Harry Clarke, 6, who tumbled off into 15 feet of water, but not until he had twice pulled her beneath the surface.

"I just did what I learned in school, I think it was in our etiquette lessons," she said afterward. "But I swallowed an awful lot of that water."

She heard the boy cry out as he fell into the water, hurried to him and, holding him by the hair, swam about 10 feet to shore.

AUTO DROWNING OF 3 ACCIDENT

Macon Coroner's Jury Absolves Driver of Blame.

MACON, Mo., Aug. 4 (AP).—A coroner's jury ruled the drowning of three ski-d in an automobile which skidded into the Chariton River Wednesday was an unavoidable accident.

After hearing 18 witnesses the jury absolved Harold Davis of Macon, driver of the car, of blame.

Elsie Dye of Moberly, rescued by Davis, testified he had not been drinking and that she had asked to ride with him to avoid riding with a man who had been drinking.

Three highway patrolmen said he had been drinking. The drowning victims were W. O. Thomas, 40 years old, Callao; Jane Bradley, 19, Moberly; and Cyrus Asher, 43, Bucklin.

WOMAN WINS SUIT AGAINST EX-JUSTICE

His Own Opinion Cited Against Branson in Ruling He Must Pay $250 a Month.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Aug. 4 (AP).—Former Supreme Court Justice Fred P. Branson, whose own decision in a similar case rose to plague him, argued today for a new trial in the District Court which held he was legally married to Madeline Brantiff Branson.

The 47-year-old stenographer won a verdict yesterday validating her 1930 New York marriage to the ex-justice and giving her $250 a month support money.

Branson, 59, had contended during the four-day trial that the ceremony was not binding because it was performed before six months had elapsed from the time his first wife obtained her divorce.

As a last minute surprise, the woman's attorney introduced Branson's own opinion in a similar case in 1925.

Then, as Vice-Chief Justice, Branson held that since there was cohabitation after six months expired and both parties established the relation of husband and wife, the parties legally were married.

Previous evidence showed the plaintiff and her one-time employer had lived together more than six months after Mrs. Eula Branson, the ex-justice's wife, received her decree.

"I don't think there ever was a couple that made such a time and spent so much money trying to get married," said Judge John B. Wilson. "They pledged vows in a civil ceremony and under church law and after six months resided together as man and wife."

Closing arguments were both spicy and bitter.

"This defendant," said Branson, "is asking the courts of this state whether a younger, a more lascivious woman can cross the threshold of a home because she is in his office and through the weakness of the defendant—no matter how culpable he may be—to break up a home."

"She used the weapon of sex to drive a faithful, now gray-haired woman (his first wife) into the divorce court—the weapon that has been used by woman ever since Adam fell in the Garden of Eden."

Judge Wilson declared he did not find that the plaintiff pressed Branson to divorce his wife.

He declined to fix responsibility for "a mutual infatuation" he said arose while the woman Branson's stenographer, and the court believes that as in love affairs, both the parties are responsible.

Hearing of arguments for a trial was set for 10 a. m. Branson said he was ready to appeal the verdict to a higher court. He claims he made and lost a fortune in Texas oil while carrying the love affair with his stenographer.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 4 (AP).—Kentucky's Democratic and Republican primaries Saturday will be the first since the Hatch law, prohibiting most Federal employees from participating in elections, became operative.

There are four Republican candidates for Governor, John Sherman Cooper, King Swopes, G. Tom Hawk and L. O. Smith. The latter is the Mayor of Harlan. The race, however, observers say, appears to be between Cooper and Swopes.

Other candidates include the late leading Democratic candidates, who claim New Deal support, is an attorney for the CIO, who has been charging that the action of Brown will mean backing for John L. Lewis. Johnson has been endorsed by the State Federation of Labor.

Other than the labor issue, the leading Democratic candidates have almost identical platforms. Observers say Senator Barkley is certain to have the backing of Kentucky's delegation at the 1940 Democratic National Convention as a write-in candidate for the presidential nomination.

Brown and Arnett openly have begged their support to Barkley and Johnson has said he "will support" the Senator if nominated.

Hot Republican Primary. The Republicans are in the midst of the hottest party primary contest since 1927 when Flem D. Sampson, now a Circuit Judge, defeated Robert Lawson for the nomination and went on to win the Governorship from J. C. W. Beckham, a Democratic former Governor. The Republicans have given no indication of the preference for presidential nominee in 1940.

Polls open at 6 a. m. and close at 8 p. m. The counting does not start until an hour after the close and goes on until midnight, to be resumed at 6 a. m. Monday and continued until the election is complete. It is a long ballot in the primary, observers say it may be several days before the results of the Governor's race are definitely determined.

Murphy Considering Booklet to Interpret Hatch Law. WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Justice Department undertook today the enforcement of the new-enacted Hatch law curtailing the political activities of Federal employees.

By SAM J. SHELTON
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

HOW national political conventions are largely dominated by jobholders, a condition the new Hatch Act is intended to correct in some degree, was shown in an analysis published in the Post-Dispatch June 21, 1938. This study showed that nearly half of the delegates then about to assemble to renominates President Roosevelt were on the public payroll and that another large segment was composed of persons holding office in the Democratic party organization, the two classes constituting two-thirds of the convention personnel.

The Hatch measure, signed into law by the President Wednesday, in restricting participation in political campaigns by jobholders, applies only to those in the service of the Federal Government, but its farther, President Roosevelt said his reasons for signing the bill, said he hoped Congress would consider amending it to forbid political campaign activities by state and local governmental officials and employees in elections where Federal officers are to be filled. This is as far as a Federal statute could go.

Act Applied to 1936. If the act as it stands had applied to the 1936 Democratic convention it would have kept out as delegates only that part of the jobholding contingent attached to the Federal payroll, and not quite all of that, for members of Congress, Cabinet officers and a few policy-making officials are exempted. In the case of the 1936 Missouri delegation of 48 members, with 30 votes, only one was a Federal officeholder plainly coming under the provisions of the act. This was a district director of the WPA.

Two other Federal officials in that delegation were Senators Bennett C. Clark and Harry S. Truman. Fourteen other delegates held state or local offices, a total of 17 on the public payroll.

In the Illinois delegation more than half were on the public payroll, but as in the case of Missouri few of these were in the class of Federal employees barred by the new statute. Among those in the prohibited class were two internal revenue collectors and a United States District Attorney.

In many states the ratio of jobholders among the delegates was much higher. In Arkansas it was 18 out of 36, in Connecticut 26 out of 40, in Louisiana 16 out of 20, in Maine 9 out of 14, in Nevada 7 out of 12, in New Hampshire 6 out of 12, in New Jersey 41 out of 64, in New Mexico 11 out of 12, in South Dakota 6 out of 8, in Utah 6 out of 12, in Washington 10 out of 20 and in Wyoming 6 out of 12.

Highest Ratio in Hatch's State. The highest ratio of jobholders to delegates—11 out of 12—was in New Mexico, home State of Senator Carl A. Hatch, author of the measure bearing his name. A few weeks ago when Senator Hatch was having difficulty getting the House Judiciary Committee to consider his bill he described its purposes as follows:

"The bill would prohibit Federal employees such as district attorneys, internal revenue collectors, customs officers and thousands of other employees in clerical positions from actively participating in politics—and I want it to do that very thing."

"It will prevent all these employees from going as delegates to conventions, and I want it to do that very thing, because if ever there has been an abuse of patronage in the history of the country it has been the packing of political conventions by political employees."

*The canvass of Illinois delegates was incomplete when the article was published, but later information showed approximately 50 per cent were on the public payroll.

The canvass covered 1277, or 78 per cent, of the 1631 delegates. Out of the total number canvassed 558, or 44 per cent, were on the public payroll, and 256 others held party offices. These combined groups totaling 814 delegates were 64 per cent of those canvassed.

eliminate the influence of such politically powerful persons, whose word might be law in party circles, the very existence of the measure, with its strict penal provisions, likely will stimulate rival political factions in a way that will weaken the power of the jobholders.

The terms of the act are so broad as to prohibit Federal employees or officeholders, except Congressmen and other few exempted classes, from openly campaigning for or advocating the election of any particular persons to public offices or as convention delegates. The act applies to primaries as well as to general elections.

The act makes violation of any of its provisions a felony with maximum penalty of a year in prison and $1000 fine.

The act forbids such political activity as Gov. Lloyd C. Stark complained of in 1938 when he charged that WPA workers in the State were lined up for Judge James V. Billings, Pendergast candidate for a State Supreme Court nomination, and against the Governor's choice, Judge James M. Douglas.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES ON MEXICAN OIL ROW

Diplomats Pessimistic Over Settlement on Basis of Cardenas' New Proposals.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—Diplomatic circles were pessimistic today over the possibility of settlement of the Mexican oil controversy on the basis of that Government's new proposals to American oil companies.

The chief point at issue appeared to be that of management of the expropriated oil properties in Mexico, valued unofficially at about $150,000,000.

The opinion was expressed in some quarters that the American companies were not offered sufficient voice in the management to enable them to make enough profit to pay them for the eventual loss of the properties.

The question of ownership did not appear to excite much argument. It is thought here that President Cardenas of Mexico has committed himself irrevocably on Mexican ownership of the properties and could not back down without losing face in his own country.

Few Changes in Plan. His new proposals—made to prevent breakdown of the negotiations were brought from Mexico City by Ambassador Castillo Najera and communicated by Donald R. Richberg, representing the American companies, to his principals.

Details were not disclosed, but it is understood the plan made a few changes in the proposed basis of settlement, which up to this time have been:

A contract for possibly 50 years, during which the companies would operate the properties with the collaboration of the Mexican Government; payment of adequate salaries to employees and revenue to the Mexican Government; a fair return to the companies from the sale of oil; the properties to be acknowledged to be Mexican at the end of the contract; and the companies to continue development of other oil lands in Mexico under Government supervision.

Negotiations for 17 Months. The negotiations have dragged on for nearly 17 months following the expropriation of American, British and Netherlands-owned properties in March, 1938.

If the American negotiations succeed, they will be the basis for agreement between the Mexican Government and the American oil companies.

U. S. FOREIGN POLICY ISSUES DEFERRED TO NEXT SESSION

Congress Adjourning With Basic Questions Which Divide It and President Still Unsettled.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—The dozen or so principal enactments of this session dealing directly with foreign affairs involved no decision on the basic questions dividing Congress and the President.

How far should the Government go in protecting American interests abroad and in co-operating with other nations in seeking to safeguard world peace? Should the sale of arms to warring nations be permitted?

An exception to the foreign policy discord was the sign of agreement among some leaders of both parties on the administration's sudden and unexpected notice canceling the 1911 commercial treaty with Japan. This action clears the way for congressional debate on an embargo against the shipment to Japan of raw materials aiding that nation in its undeclared war on China.

Thus, unless a European conflict should precipitate a call for a special session in the meantime, Congress in January will face the two momentous issues of the Japanese embargo and revision of the neutrality law.

Neutrality Legislation Promise. From leading Senators of both parties President Roosevelt has exacted the promise that neutrality legislation will be released from the Foreign Relations Committee and take its place among the very first subjects debated when Congress reconvenes. The committee declined to send the legislation to the Senate floor this year after the House defied administration wishes and retained a modified embargo against the sale of arms to warring nations.

The warm reception given the President's defense recommendations was in contrast with the cool shoulder turned to some other proposals. With hardly a murmur of criticism, Congress provided for these military reinforcements:

A treble army air force of 5500 or more planes; new guns, tanks and other weapons costing $110,000,000; string of air bases and depots on the continent, on offshore islands and in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and in the Canal Zone; more than a score of new warships.

BLIND VOTING ON BILLS IN SENATE OBJECTED TO

Vandenberg Asks That at Least Money Involved Be Stated, Despite Rush.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Senate's legislative machinery has reached such a pre-adjournment speed that some members are protesting.

Bills were passed so rapidly yesterday members frequently had difficulty in keeping up with the proposals. The bills had just come from the House, and copies had not been printed.

Senator Austin of Vermont, acting Republican leader, called a halt at one point to ask that the clerk read, besides the title, the name of the committee which had approved the legislation.

Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, later asked that the clerk give the amount of money proposed in each proceeding against "such a slipshod method of legislation."

The pace also proved a bit fast for Senator Smith of South Carolina.

"Something is going to slip by here that members won't like," he asserted. Turning to Democratic Leader Barkley, he inquired, "has this ever been done before?"

"It is a usual practice just before adjournment," Barkley replied.

SENATE AMENDS AND PASSES BILL FOR NEW PANAMA LOCKS

Measure Must Go Back to House for Concurrence in Employment Clause.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP).—Legislation to provide a third set of locks for the Panama Canal won Senate approval yesterday after it was amended to meet some of the objections raised to the measure.

Because of the amendment, which stipulates that United States citizens be employed in a supervisory, skilled, technical and clerical work, the bill must go back to the House. That chamber passed it several days ago.

The measure would authorize expenditure of $15,000,000 in the next fiscal year, toward a total estimated cost of $27,000,000. The additional locks were recommended by Secretary of War Woodring as a defense measure.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by vested plutocracy or predatory poverty.

JOSEPH PULITZER,

April 10, 1907.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Back of the "Ripper" Bill.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Logan bill to hamstring the quasi-judicial boards set up under the New Deal fortunately has been forestalled for this session of Congress. By making their decisions subject to court review on matters of fact as well as law, this measure might very well paralyze several of the key administrative agencies and wipe out many of the gains made in the past few years in bringing our economic machinery under social control.

It is pertinent to inquire why Congress has undergone a reaction which causes it to be willing, apparently, to pass such a measure. First of all, Congress doubtless is registering the nationwide swing of sentiment back in a more conservative direction. But beyond this, some of the administrative agencies in question have invited reprisals by a high-handed and one-sided policy.

For example, the Labor Board, so long as it felt safe in so doing, disregarded suggestions for a revision of policy to insure fairness to all parties in a labor dispute. But since Congress has shown a readiness to revise the Wagner Act, the Labor Board has hastened to offer to make some important changes in procedure without being compelled to do so by law. This savors strongly of a government of men rather than of laws. And it is indicative of the condition which has caused Congress to swing around to the point where it is willing to do what amounts almost to sabotage of some of the administrative agencies.

If the quasi-judicial boards are to counteract this feeling, they must take care to show an objective attitude at all times.

EDMUND FRANKLIN.

Who Knows the Answer?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NOW that the perennial covered bridge question has been solved again—or is it?—I wish someone who really knows would explain why trains cross Eads Bridge on the left-hand track. I have asked numerous railroad men and have yet to receive a satisfactory explanation. Everywhere else around here trains like automobiles run on the right side. Perhaps the Terminal thinks the British flag still flies across the Mississippi.

CURIOUS.

Good Work of the WPA.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I HAVE heard a great deal of criticism of the WPA. However, the work it has done is, in my opinion, a great accomplishment.

Today much of Missouri's beauty is due to work of the WPA and the CCC. Hill after hill of scrub oak and underbrush has been transformed into beautiful State parks. In St. Louis, the River des Peres has been transformed from a sewer into a parkway. Parks have been improved, and streets and highways have been repaired so that we may enjoy these beauties.

With so much interest shown in your editorial, "Missouri in Midsummer," I salute Mr. Roosevelt for his efforts to make Missouri more beautiful.

VIRGINIA SMITH.

Delay in Repair of Olive Street Road.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A GROUP of farmers on Olive Street Arad would like to know why the bridge between Creve Coeur and Fern Ridge is torn out when we are trying to move our garden truck to market. At the rate it is being repaired, the road will be closed for months to come.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY.

On Disability Pensions for Police.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WOULD certainly like to know why my husband, an injured overseas war veteran who has been discharged twice within the last two years from Government hospitals as incurable, does not receive one penny compensation while able-bodied policemen get disability pensions.

I'll wager my health is far worse than that of any of these policemen, yet I am compelled to work every day to support the two of us, and believe me, my salary is far less than half a policeman's.

NO JUSTICE.

Don't Use School Funds for Relief.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IF immediate steps are not taken to check the movement to divert the revenue of the public schools for relief, Missouri will find adequate education a thing of the past. If the State needs more money for relief, and it certainly looks as if this were the case, it should be obtained by new taxes, not by milking the public school funds.

SAM HILL.

Whimsical Origin of Elephant Rocks.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT has been my privilege to view many times those great granite boulders near Graniteville, known as Elephant Rocks. A whimsical school teacher once told his pupils that the Creator, after forming this world, had a handful of nebulous substance left which he held in reserve.

Observing that the world, spinning upon its axis, wobbled a bit, he steadied it by flinging the handful of material where it was needed to effect proper balance, making the Ozark Mountains. Elephant Rocks were supposed to be the proof of this occurrence.

However we may account for their origin, Elephant Rocks are a valuable asset and should be preserved in a State park.

EMMA W. BOLACKER.

CAUGHT IN THE CROSS FIRE.

Unless the coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats uses some sense of proportion in exercising its new-found power in Congress, the country will suffer for its arrogance.

To defeat an immature and extravagant lending scheme is one thing; to set out to knife all the legislation remaining on the calendar simply in order to point up the President's loss of leadership is something else. The folks back home may relish a show of independence in Congress, but they do not want drift, deadlock and disorder.

In refusing to vote $119,000,000 for the Commodity Credit Corporation to use in making crop loans, the House is guilty of patent and puerile inconsistency. Congress has already voted more than a billion dollars for the farm program this year; whatever effect this expenditure may have in helping the farmer will be largely canceled out unless the additional appropriation is made. It is as if a man made a $10 payment on an $11 article and then sacrificed his equity rather than pay the other dollar.

In the confusion and disorder now prevailing, several vital measures which had been considered as good as passed are now endangered. Among these is the bill to prevent contemplated increases in the old-age annuity taxes from going into effect and to do away with the cruel myth according to which the public was asked to believe that an enormous reserve was being built up for the payment of the annuities years hence.

This measure—the only substantial encouragement business has received in the way of lower taxes—is imperiled by the stampede for adjournment. A Congressman's anxiety to go home for a six-month vacation, it should be noted, usually runs in exact ratio to his bitterness against measures to ameliorate sweatshop hours and wages.

The give-away on the true feelings of many members of the "economy coalition" can be seen in their willingness to cripple vital regulatory agencies by withholding minor appropriations. The appropriation for enforcement of the wage-hour act was reduced by half—from $2,000,000 to $1,000,000. To a Congress which has authorized total expenditures of more than $13 billion dollars another $100,000 is the smallest of small change, but the deletion of this amount from the SEC appropriation will scuttle regulation of over-the-counter security markets and foreclose a promising probe of investment trusts. Such examples could be multiplied, but these tell the story.

The conservative bloc has demonstrated its strength. It is now time for it to demonstrate a sense of responsibility. Congress should recover its equilibrium and remain in session until every pending bill is disposed of on its merits. The country is in no condition to take the cross fire of a feud between Congress and the White House for the next year and a half.

THE GUILD AND THE THIRD TERM.

The American Newspaper Guild was organized to provide the means for collective bargaining among newspaper employees and to improve their economic conditions in an industry generally underpaid. Yesterday, the guild's national convention at San Francisco endorsed President Roosevelt and petitioned him to run for a third term.

In taking this action the guild convention operated not as a professional or labor organization but as a public policy declaring body. It passed judgment on a question over which there is sharp difference of opinion among its members. It gave anti-guild publishers something with which to support their argument that the guild seeks to influence the political opinions of its members.

This is unfortunate all around. The third term is a subject fit for wide discussion, but many guild members must agree that they should participate as individual citizens, not as members of the guild.

A RACKET THAT IS DONE.

A craft about which the general public knows little or nothing is the commemorative coin racket. The reason is plain. Only coin dealers and coin collectors care anything about memorial coins. Such coins never get into circulation. Their original price, when distributed by commemorative associations, is regularly two to three times the monetary value. As more collectors seek them, their price rises until, for example, one of the 1933 issues of the Oregon trail half dollar sells for $9.75.

Congress never should have been a party to such a profiteering business. Yet it has been and in a big way in recent years. Since 1934, no fewer than 42 commemorative coins have been issued. The Oregon trail half dollar has been issued in 20 separate coins—in different years and at the three mints—so the collector must pay upward of $50 for the set.

Under a bill which Congress has passed at the urging of Representative Cochran of St. Louis, this business is to be brought under control if not eliminated altogether. When President Roosevelt signs the bill, as he is certain to do, further issuance of old memorial coins will be illegal. It will break up the playhouse of the coin dealers—something that should have been done long ago.

A FOUL IN FOUL WEATHER.

Triton blew his wreathed horn to arouse the "deep immense Atlantic," as Proteus lashed the mounting waves with his finny tail, bluff old Aeolus loosed the "struggling winds and the roaring gales" from his pouch and Father Neptune belled in glee at the heavy weather show. And thus Cowes week, which is to yachtsmen what Ascot week is to horsemen, got under way this week with an unromantic shindig that set the seahorses dancing off Consort Shoal. Routed, the sleek yachting fleet, with all its shining brass and polished mahogany, sought shelter as the elements raged about the sleepy Isle of Wight port.

But pounding ahead of the racing leaden clouds came Harold S. Vanderbilt's stanch Vim well in the lead of T. O. M. Sopwith's limping Tomahawk. Vim was clocked in 3:04.26. Of the two other 12-meter yachts in the race, one sank, with the loss of a paid hand, and the other was forced to retire early in the 27-mile race. It was a great victory for "Mike" Vanderbilt, but, after a three-hour deliberation, the Royal Yacht Committee supported Sopwith's contention that he had been fouled at the starting line when the Vim crowded the Tomahawk.

That recalls the 1934 fight between the two skippers when both Rainbow and Endeavor claimed fouls in the final race. In this case, however, the margin was so wide that the foul could have made no difference. Nevertheless, not a peep came from Mike Vanderbilt. It is safe to say that he will keep silently to his course and look to his laurels in the remaining race. He had his reward when a Cowes veteran greeted him at the finish of that fierce battle against his British rivals and the eternal elements with the query: "Do ye have wind like this in America all the time?"

THAT 1936 DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

On the eve of the 1936 Democratic national convention at Philadelphia, which was to renominate President Roosevelt, the Post-Dispatch printed a detailed analysis of the convention personnel from the standpoint of public and party jobs. The analysis covered 1277, or nearly four-fifths of the 1631 delegates. What it showed was that out of the number canvassed almost half were on the public payroll, while 256 held party offices. Together these groups comprised 64 per cent of those canvassed.

The statistics aside, the analysis demonstrated that the Democratic national convention of 1936—and it was not unlike Republican conventions when the Republicans were in power—could not be a free-willed political body, able to follow its own conscience and ready to decide policies and make nominations according to its own light and leading. The delegates knew where their bread was buttered. Their jobs, public and party, were at stake, along with the continuance of the administration.

The Hatch Act, which the President signed this week, is designed to check, in so far as Federal employees are concerned, this stacking of conventions. To show how the Hatch Act would have affected the Democratic convention of 1936, the Post-Dispatch prints, elsewhere in this issue, the table of that convention, together with an explanation by the writer of the original article.

One glaring omission of Congress must be cited in this connection. In exempting legislative employees—congressional secretaries, clerks and the like from the law—Congress granted an immunity to its employees which it has denied appointees of the executive. This takes a great deal from congressional professions of reform. One of the first things the next session should do is to extend the Hatch Act to legislative employees.

A FARM SENATOR TO THE FARMERS.

Scott Lucas, whom Illinois promoted from the House of Representatives to the Senate last November, made an important speech in the upper chamber yesterday. It was important not only because it gave an answer to the critics of the reciprocal trade program, developed under the Hull treaties. It was significant also because the answer was made by a Senator from an important agricultural State, whose chief assignments in both House and Senate have been to their respective committees on agriculture. When Mr. Lucas called on the farmers to ask themselves whether they want to forsake the gains under the reciprocal trade treaties he spoke as a man from farming country whose chief legislative interest can be described as the improvement of the lot of the American farmer. His remarks should have influence for the Hull program where it is most needed.

SCHOOLS AND RELIEF.

A writer in the Letter Column objects to using any of the school fund for relief. The proposal is, he thinks, a threat "to adequate education" in Missouri. If more money is needed for relief, he admits may be the case, he suggests new taxes.

Our public school fund today approximates $28,000,000. That is a handsome provision. It is more than enough. If the schools were given one-fourth of the State's revenue, the minimum fixed by the Constitution, they would still have $21,000,000—an ample allowance.

But suppose we accede to our correspondent's contention and let the school fund stand as it is. And suppose we act on his advice and levy new taxes for our relief needs. Gov. Stark estimated our relief requirements at $9,000,000. All right, assume now we have found a new tax source that will yield $9,000,000. But the schools would be entitled a third of that, or $3,000,000, and the school lobby would demand it, and get it. Relief, therefore, would still remain unprovided for. So here is what we arrive at: In order to produce $9,000,000 for relief by a brand new tax we should have to raise a total of more than $13,000,000.

Could a new source of revenue be found that would yield an additional $13,000,000? The answer is silence. The practical solution for our distressing relief problem is to award the public school system its constitutional quota of the revenue.

All we need in Missouri for all purposes is a sensible and fair administration of the enormous revenues collected from the tax-ridden people.

Senator Taft says "Roosevelt can't win." Chairman Hamilton said the same thing in '36, and said it louder, too, and funnier.

THE MIDDLEMAN NO OGRE.

The middleman looks like a pirate in statistics released by the Twentieth Century Fund. The package of cigarettes for which you pay 14 cents—without a local sales tax—costs less than 4 cents to make. The manufacturer produces a refrigerator for $56, for which the purchaser pays $156. Women's hats that retail for $5 roll off the assembly lines at less than $2 per spectacle. And a quart of rye whiskey—price $2.40—is distilled for 30 cents.

But the survey hastens to absolve the middleman. He is not, as a class, getting rich quick. Further, "a wide margin between production cost and retail selling price does not necessarily indicate waste or undue profit in the distribution process," reads the report. A product, whatever it is, passes through many hands, undergoes many experiences, in its eventful journey from field or factory to the ultimate consumer.

The Twentieth Century Fund was established by the late Edward A. Filene of Boston, who once described his career as "the failure of a successful millionaire." This deprecatory and inaccurate judgment derived from his inability to realize two pet ambitions. First, his shop democracy. Second, the problem of distribution costs.

Lincoln Steffens, in his autobiography, quotes Filene, back in 1908, as saying that "the cost of distribution of manufactured goods is 55 per cent of the price of those goods. This is disgraceful. This is bad management."

Twenty years later, the merchant-statesman admitted: "The cost of distribution is higher than it was then, even in my store." The solution hasn't been found and seems to be receding.

Gone are "The Hundred Days," and now the Napoleonic career swings into a procession of legislative Waterloo.

RENDEZVOUS UNDER THE CACTUS.

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Chamberlain is responsible for failure of England, France and Russia to form anti-aggression alliance, says veteran journalist; charges Prime Minister with pursuing negotiations as gestures to obtain better terms from Germany in "policy of appeasement."

Robert Dell, Foreign Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, in the Living Age.

THE prolongation of the negotiations with Soviet Russia and the ambiguous attitude of the British Government are bringing about a dangerous situation. At the time of writing it seems possible that, even though the British Government has informed Hitler that any interference in Danzig will be resisted, the worst may still happen.

Hitler has, unfortunately, as much reason to doubt the sincerity of the recent change in British policy as the Russians have, and there is too much reason to believe that he is not convinced that the British Government will fulfill its obligations to Poland. The result of Neville Chamberlain's double-crossing is that he is distrusted by all.

It can hardly be doubted that he never wished nor intended the negotiations with Russia to succeed and started them only in the hope that they would frighten Hitler into coming to an arrangement with England on better terms. Chamberlain has never abandoned the "policy of appeasement," the aim of which was an Anglo-German alliance.

It is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the negotiations with Russia have been deliberately prolonged by the British Government in the hope that Hitler would become "reasonable." The hope has been disappointed. The British overtures to Hitler have only increased his belief that the British Government does not mean business in the negotiations with Russia and made him more arrogant than ever. This is not surprising, for negotiations have been going on for more than three and a half months.

The first British proposals to Russia were made on April 15 and about five weeks later the British Government at last agreed in principle to the Russian proposal of a triple alliance between England, France and Russia. The Russian position has been perfectly clear and consistent from the first. It is that there must be complete reciprocity between the three parties to the proposed alliance, all of whom must be bound to go to the assistance of any one of them that is attacked, either directly or because it has gone to the aid of another state that has been the victim of an aggression.

The British Government has hitherto refused to agree to the inclusion of Finland, Latvia and Estonia on the ground that they do not wish to be defended by Russia. No doubt, the governments of these three states have not asked to be defended by Russia, but even by England and France. They are manifestly afraid of Germany to compromise themselves by making such a request, but it does not follow that they would refuse to be defended if they were attacked.

In any case, the British Government has asked Russia to guarantee against aggression not only Poland, Belgium, Greece, Russia and Turkey, none of which has asked for a Russian guarantee so far as is known, but also Holland and Switzerland, which have not even normal diplomatic relations with Russia. The Soviet Government made no objection, but it insists all states bordering Russia should also be guaranteed.

How could the Soviet Government do otherwise? It is determined, quite rightly, that what happened in Czechoslovakia on Oct. 1 and March 15 shall not be repeated in any of the border states of the Soviet Union. The Russians recognize that, if En-

NO NEED FOR ALARM IN DOG DAYS.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

DR. JOHN J. SHAW, Pennsylvania Secretary of Health, properly denounces as just another "grandmother's superstition" the notion that "dog days" promote a general madness among dogs.

Surviving from the ancient days of light and darkness is the idea that the period in July and August when the dog star, Sirius, is in heliacal ascent—usually a sultry season—causes dogs to go mad. Science continues to deride this inherited gullibility, yet every year there are people who see in every restless, thirsty or heat-irritable dog a sufferer from rabies, looking for somebody to bite.

Dogs can develop summer complaints, just as human beings do. A dog's tongue hangs out as naturally as its tail wags, more so for cooling purposes in summer, while foam on the mouth is nothing unusual.

It all sums up to a preposterous and wholly unjustified suspicion of dogs during dog days, and when any innocent dog is killed just because some victim of a foolish superstition gets excited, a grave wrong is done.

Beals vs. Wallace

Books in the News

THE American farmer has shown himself incapable of properly preserving the land he farms, and must be deprived of his individual right to ruin it, Carleton Beals concludes in the latest of his studies, "American Earth" (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia).

The solution to the country's land problem, Mr. Beals decides, is not to be found in the program of Secretary Wallace, which he calls a "graveyard policy." There should be no crop restriction, he says, rather control of abundance. The land should be regarded not as something to be exploited or destroyed, but as a national patrimony to be used efficiently and conserved. Controls, he believes, are inevitable.

Land monopolies, tenantry and share-cropping must be ended and Americans be given free access to the soil, says Mr. Beals. "The land of America," he writes, "must once more be considered a sort of public domain as it was before it was originally stolen and distributed—but not as an idle domain. This difference must now come into play: those given access to the land can no longer, as of old, be permitted to destroy its fertility, through careless erosion, planting of improper crops, or other abuses."

In the final chapter he pays his respects to Secretary Wallace, suggesting that "in the end perhaps, he will succeed in starving all of us." The administration's land use program, he says, largely ignores the needs of the great mass of farm population, while destroying foreign markets and increasing the cost of food. It all boils down, he says, "to our paying more to produce less to pay still more, in order that fewer of us can pay more to produce still less."

The London Times was in truth "The Thunderer" in the 1841-84 period covered by Volume 2 of "The History of the Times," subtitled "The Tradition Established" (Macmillan Co., New York). The 30-year regime of its great editor, John Thaddeus Deane, came during these years, and the newspaper was a powerful voice in governmental affairs. It was a time of enterprise, in establishment of its renowned foreign staff, and of new demonstrations of its independence.

With the rise of the "penny press" came a temptation to cheapen the Times and meet competition, but John Walter III, the chief proprietor, decided to make no compromise, but to maintain the paper's character and standards. Thus was established the tradition that continues today. The book, written by past and present members of its staff, is richly illustrated. It is a veritable mine of information to students of the period and of journalistic development.

THE literature on the Missouri fur trade is notably increased by the first publication of "Tabeau's Narrative of Louis' Expedition to the Upper Missouri" (University of Oklahoma Press, Norman, Ok.), edited by Dr. Annie Heloise Abel. Memoir of a French Canadian voyageur, sent by a St. Louis merchant to develop the fur business in the Northwest, it reports experiences and observations among the Arikara Indians 128 miles above St. Louis in 1803-04.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug.

Haywood Brown, New York unionist, was re-elected president of the American Newspaper Guild. Milton Kaufman, New York was elected vice-president, succeeding Eddy, veteran Guild officer.

Delegates are to be gathered tonight at the Island Golden Gate Exposition tomorrow has been designated "American Newspaper Guild Term Indorsement." The Guild went on record today as favoring a third day parade for President Roosevelt.

Opposition to any new WPA program for employment on workers' production of socially-useful objects.

Another resolution pled qualified support to Harry W. Frost, CIO leader, in a nomination trial now in progress, and asked Gov. Charles Olson to pardon Warren G. Harding, serving a life term in prison in connection with the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombing.

The Wire Service Committee report, urging enrolling eligible employees of the Associated Press, United Press and National News Service into the union, was approved.

The Guild adopted a resolution condemning the "reactionary" policies of the Associated Press and instructed the international executive board to "take the proper steps to enforce these policies . . . to the detriment of the entire labor movement . . . and the Associated Press, which is responsible for the Association's anti-labor relations with its employees."

Father Charles E. Coughlin, a radio priest, was called an "enemy of progressiveism."

REVAMPED FOUR ACES IN BRIDGE SEMIFINAL

Title Defenders to Meet Team That Won Easily in National Contract Tournament Yesterday.

ASBURY PARK, N. J. (AP).—Four surviving teams battling through the first semifinal rounds today in the world's championship master event of the National Contract Bridge Tournament.

A revamped Four Aces, Jacoby, Howard Schenck, Robert Lightner, M. D. Mail, Robert McPherran of New York, the defending champions, easily defeated Richard Ecker and Robert C. of New York, E. N. Marcuson and Sigmund Dornbusch, Newark, in the second round. They were pitted today against St. Stearns, Harry Fishbein, and Robert Appleyard of New York, and the team which also won by a wide margin. On the other hand, the Philadelphia foursome, Charles H. Goren, Mrs. R. C. John R. Crawford and Ch. Solomon barely nosed out Josephine Culbertson, Mrs. York, and P. E. Sheard of Toronto.

Another favored foursome, S. Lochridge, A. Mitchell, Edward Hynes Jr. and W. Von Zedtwitz of New York, skinned through with a victory. Miss Ruth Sherman, Mrs. E. and Sam Fry Jr. of New York, and L. C. Leeds of Detroit, the "Lochridge quartet" in the finals.

A team of women, Mrs. Horn, Mrs. Mabel Ervin and Valerie Klein of New York, Gussie Kleon of Great Britain, won the championship. The team of four women, Mrs. Horn, Mrs. Mabel Ervin and Valerie Klein of New York, Gussie Kleon of Great Britain, won the championship.

FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW FOR T. A. DWYER, ATTORNEY

He Succumbs to Complicated Diseases at 64; Lawyer City 25 Years.

Funeral services for Thomas A. Dwyer, an attorney here who died yesterday of complications of diseases at St. Joseph's Hospital, will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. at St. Alphonsus Church, 1115 North Grand. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

Mr. Dwyer, a graduate in law from St. Louis University School of Law, was 62 years old. He had been married to his wife, Mrs. Dwyer, for 35 years. He was survived by his wife, Mrs. Dwyer, and his daughter, Miss Margaret Dwyer.

Woodring Sails for Panama. NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP)—Secretary of War Woodring sailed today for the Panama Canal to study in relation to the waterway and strengthen military equipment. With him are Major General B. H. Sundt and Joseph O. Mauborgne, chief of the Panama Canal zone.

BROWN AGAIN HEADS
NEWSPAPER GUILD

Milton Kaufman Elected Executive Vice President, Succeeding Jonathan Eddy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4 (AP).—Haywood Brown, New York columnist, was re-elected today as president of the American Newspaper Guild. Milton Kaufman of New York was elected executive vice-president, succeeding Jonathan Eddy, veteran Guild officer.

Delegates are to be guests at a dinner tonight at the Treasure Island Golden Gate Exposition, and tomorrow has been designated as "American Newspaper Guild day."

Third Term Indorsed. The Guild went on record yesterday as favoring a third term for President Roosevelt. It also urged a new WPA program basing employment on workers' skill and production of socially-useful projects.

Another resolution pledged unqualified support to Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO leader, whose deportation trial now is going on here, and asked Gov. Culbert L. Olsen to pardon Warren K. Billings, serving a life term in Folsom prison in connection with the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness day parade bombing.

Opposition to any weakening of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, condemnation of evasion of the Fair Labor Standards Act and continuation of the La Follette Civil Liberties Investigating Committee were expressed in the report of the Legislative Committee, which was approved.

Wire Service Report Approved. The Wire Service Committee's report, urging enrolling of 2000 eligible employees of the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service into the Guild, also was approved.

The Guild adopted a resolution condemning the "reactionary labor policies of the Associated Press" and instructed the Guild's international executive board to "take the proper steps to bring these policies... to the attention of the labor movement."

The Associated Press' 1400 member newspapers which are responsible for the Associated Press' anti-labor relations with its own employees.

Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, was condemned as "an enemy of progressive unionism."

IN BRIDGE SEMIFINAL TODAY

Title Defenders to Meet Team That Won Easily in National Contract Tournament Yesterday.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 4 (AP).—Four surviving teams are battling through the first of two semifinals today in the world's championship masters' team event of the National Contract Bridge Tournament.

A revamped Four Aces, Oswald Jacoby, Howard Schenken, Theodore Lightner, M. D. Maier and Robert McPherran of New York, title defenders, easily defeated Dr. Richard Ecker and Robert Chastkin of New York, E. N. Marcus of Boston and Sigmond Dornbusch of Newark, in the second round and are pitted today against Sherman Stearns, Harry Fishbein, Morrie Ellis and Robert Appleyard of New York and Henry Chanin of Atlanta, who also won by a wide margin.

On the other hand, the surviving Philadelphia foursome of Charles H. Goren, Mrs. R. C. Young, John R. Crawford and Charles J. Solomon barely nosed out Mrs. Josephine Culbertson, Mrs. A. M. Nobel, Alphonse Moysse Jr. of New York, and P. E. Sheardowne of Chicago.

Another favored foursome, Charles L. Lochridge, A. Mitchell Barnes, Edward Hymes Jr. and Waldemar Von Zedtwitz of New York, just missed through with a victory over Miss Ruth Sherman, Mrs. E. E. Clement and Sam Fry Jr. of New York, and C. L. Leeds of Deal, N. J.

The Goren team is playing the Lochridge quartet in the semifinals.

A team of women, Mrs. F. J. Horn, Mrs. Mabel Ervin and Mrs. Valerie Klein of New York, and Mrs. Gussie Planco of Great Neck, won the championship for amateur foursomes early this morning, third of the week's seven contests to be concluded.

Funeral services for Thomas A. Dwyer, an attorney here for 29 years, who died yesterday of a complication of diseases at St. Mary's hospital, will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. at St. Alphonsus Catholic church, 1118 North Grand boulevard. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

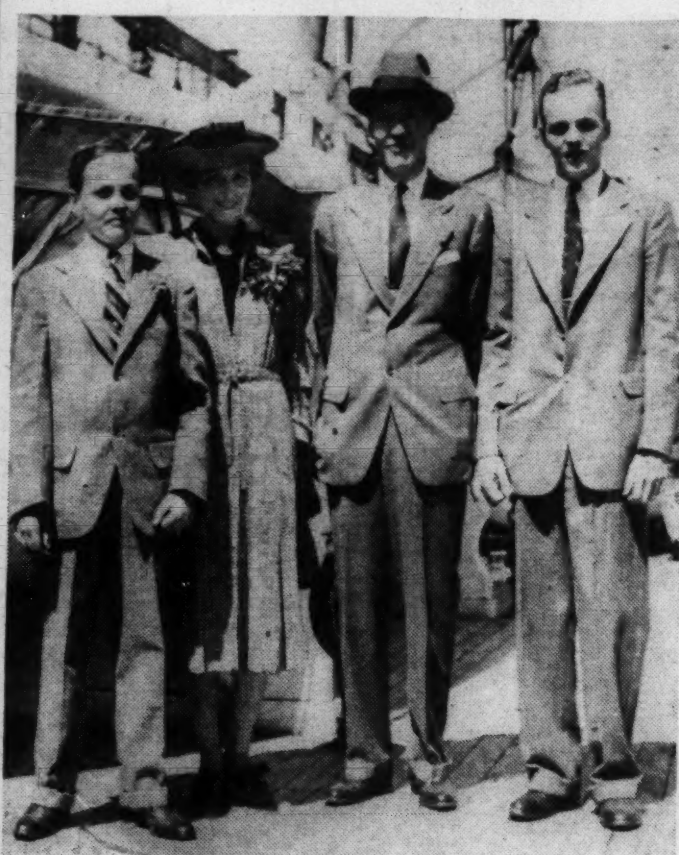

Mr. Dwyer, a graduate in 1910 of St. Louis University School of Law, was 62 years old. He lived at the Miami Hotel. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Mayne Sullivan and Mrs. Margaret Dwyer.

On Trip to Europe

MR. AND MRS. HARRISON HOBLITZELLE OF Ithaca, Pa., formerly of St. Louis, with their sons, GEORGE and HARRISON JR., on board the Aquitania. They sailed Wednesday from New York for a late summer trip to Europe. Before her marriage, Mrs. Hoblitzelle was Miss Mary D. Jones, a former Veiled Prophet Queen. She has recently been visiting the Bixby family of St. Louis at Bolton Landing, on Lake George, N. Y.

anne place. The wedding is to take place at the Bethel Lutheran Church with the Rev. Alfred J. Korris officiating. A reception will be held afterward at the Walthe house.

Miss Florence Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Wood, 7819 Gannon avenue, became the bride of George Henry Barlow Jr. this morning at 10 o'clock in the rectory of St. Joseph's Church.

The Rev. John A. Pector officiated in the presence of the families and a few close friends. Mr. Barlow, who makes his home here, is the son of former St. Louisans, Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Barlow of Pittsburgh, Pa. The Barlows were here to see their son married.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her street-length dress of pink crepe had a matching jacket trimmed at the neckline and cuffs with white angora. Her accessories were white. A corsage of gardenias and pink roses completed the ensemble. Her sister, Miss June Wood, as maid of honor, wore blue silk jersey designed with a crushed girle and V-neckline. A dunoon hat and corsage of pink roses complemented the dress. Lew Moeller Jr. was best man.

After the ceremony, the families of the pair were entertained at breakfast at Candlelight House. Mrs. Wood was dressed in lavender and blue crepe, with which she wore a corsage of roses.

After a wedding trip, the pair will live at 6648 Washington avenue.

The bride attended the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, Washington University, and her husband attended Central College at Fayette, Mo., and Washington University.

Mrs. William S. Schuyler, 5803 Cates avenue, has gone to Ephraim, Wis., to spend two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wells L. Church, Des Peres road, who have a cottage there. Mr. Schuyler is with his mother, Mrs. Ralph L. Thompson, 7408 York drive.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Mudge, 7401 Kingsbury boulevard, and Mr. and Mrs. H. Bethune Hall, 7514 Byron place, will leave Saturday for a three-week tour of the West. They will go to Lake Louise, Banff Springs, Vancouver, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Miss Grace Beardsley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Beardsley, 2833 Dodder street, will become the bride of Richard C. Gerfen, son of Mrs. Carl Gerfen of Breese, Ill., next Friday evening at a 7 o'clock candle-light service at the Beardsley home. The ceremony will be attended by the family and a few close friends, will be followed by a reception for additional guests. Miss Beardsley is a graduate of the University of Illinois. Mr. Gerfen was graduated from Elmhurst College.

After a wedding trip, Mr. Gerfen will take his bride to Chicago to live.

Recent parties include the luncheon Mrs. F. H. Wolf, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. D. G. Haynes gave at the Haynes home, 7215 Greenwood drive. After the rehearsal Thursday evening, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Wolf, 28 Brittany Woods, will entertain at a buffet supper. In the wedding party will be Carl Gerfen, best man for his brother, and Miss Frances Wolf, maid of honor, for her cousin.

Miss Edna Lieber of Hotel Kingsway has returned from a six weeks' stay in New York, where she studied at the Viller Quale Music School and attended the World's Fair. Miss Lieber is director of the Community Music Schools Foundation.

Miss Jo Ann Billman will return early next week from Green Lake, Wis., where she has been spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Billman of Warsaw road, at their cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Billman and another daughter, Miss Jean Yvonne, will remain until early fall.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Scott, 3867 Shaw boulevard, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Mary Jane, will leave Sunday for New York, where they will spend several days at the World's Fair.

Mrs. Robert R. Rosenthal, 7249 Northmoor drive, and her sister, Mrs. Joseph R. Barnicle of Breese, Ill., to visit friends. After their stay in Evanston, Mrs. Rosenthal and Mrs. Barnicle will go to Douglas, Mich., for late summer visit. They will also spend the same time at Macatawa Park, Mich., before returning to St. Louis next month.

Funeral services for Mrs. Orla Mahler, 2851 Big Bend boulevard, Maplewood, who died Wednesday after a long illness, will be at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Emmanuel Episcopal church, Lockwood and Bompert avenues, Webster Groves. She was the widow of Frank A. Mahler, secretary of the St. Louis Shoe Manufacturers' and Wholesalers' Association. Two sons and four daughters survive.

NEW DATA BACK THEORY VEGETATION
GROWS ON MARS

Scientist Says It's Now Hard to Believe Life Exists Only on This Earth.

LONDON, Aug. 4 (AP).—Studies of Mars on its recent approach to the earth "now make it difficult to continue to believe that life on the earth is a result of some special unique act of creation," says Dr. H. Spencer Jones of the Royal Observatory.

Mars on July 27 made its nearest approach to the earth in 15 years, and astronomers are winding up their studies of data collected at that time.

The observations strengthened the belief held by many that there is plant life on the Mars. Hence, Dr. Jones asserts:

"The question of whether there is any animal life on Mars is of relatively minor importance compared with the now reasonably certain evidence there is vegetation.

"The bridge between animal and plant life would seem to be much narrower than the bridge between no life and plant life."

The position of Mars, low on the horizon when it approached to a distance of some 36,000,000 miles from the earth, and unfavorable atmospheric conditions made observations in the northern hemisphere difficult.

The best studies, it was said, were made by Dr. E. C. Slipher of Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., and others who set up special photographic equipment in South Africa.

Among other things, they saw an unusually heavy snowstorm in the polar areas of the planet and an enlarged dark area near a polar ice cap which seemed to be covered with vegetation nourished by a spring thaw.

GOVERNMENT TO LEND RADIUM TO FOUR MISSOURI HOSPITALS

Free Treatment of Cancer Offered at St. Louis, Kansas City, Columbia and Fulton.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 4 (AP).—Four Missouri hospitals will share in a $180,000 allotment for Government-owned radium to be lent to institutions for free treatment of cancer, the State Health Department has announced.

"Thus far a total of 873.3 milligrams of radium have been distributed in Missouri to its hospitals that treat cancer," Dr. Harry F. Parker, State Health Commissioner, said. "These hospitals include the State hospital at Fulton, the new Fischel Cancer Hospital at Columbia, both of which are under the supervision of the Missouri State Cancer Commission, and the Bernard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital at St. Louis and the Kansas City Municipal Hospital."

The Federal allotment now being prepared for shipment totals 8 1/2 grams, which will be apportioned among hospitals in 20 states.

CITY HOUSING BOARD
TO SEEK $6,000,000

To Apply for Loan From USHA Reserves Despite Defeat of $800,000,000 Bill.

The St. Louis Housing Authority voted yesterday to apply to the United States Housing Authority for a loan of $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 for slum clearance despite the defeat of the USHA's $800,000,000 lending bill in Congress.

It is hoped that the money might be obtained from a reserve fund which had been set up but not needed on previous projects built with USHA loans. The fund totals about $45,000,000.

Had the housing bill passed, St. Louis would have received a loan of at least $30,000,000, promised by Nathan Straus, USHA Administrator, on a recent visit.

William C. Connett, chairman of the local authority, said that in the event the smaller loan is obtained it is planned to proceed with one slum clearance project for whites and one for Negroes. A general description of the sites will be given to the USHA, he said, but the exact sites will not be disclosed to guard against speculators.

It will take about 60 days to complete application for the loan, which would cover 90 per cent of the cost of the projects. The remaining 10 per cent would be raised by bonds sold locally.

DR. WILLIAM L. CLAPPER DIES; PHYSICIAN IN CITY 30 YEARS

He Had Been in Failing Health Several Years; Wife, Two Daughters Survive.

Dr. William L. Clapper, a physician and surgeon in St. Louis for nearly 30 years, died early today at his home, 7928 Gannon avenue, University City. He had been in failing health for several years.

Dr. Clapper, 62 years old, had been retired from active practice since 1931. He was still a member of the staffs of St. Luke's and St. Mary's Hospitals and St. Louis University School of Medicine. Born in Unionville, Mo., he came to St. Louis in 1900 and attended Washington University School of Medicine.

His wife, Mrs. Alice Clapper, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Lucy Ann, survive.

Funeral services for Harry E. Hoener, an attorney who died of complications of an intestinal ailment Wednesday at his home, 6548 Clayton road, will be at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the residence. Burial will be in Valhalla cemetery.

Mr. Hoener, 32 years old, was a member of the legal staff of the American Automobile Insurance Co. He was a graduate of Yeatman High School and Washington University Law School. Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Hoener.

To German correspondents who met him at the pier he said: "I am here for a vacation; there is nothing political in this trip."

GUSTAV A. FRANZ
DIES IN DENVER AT 64

St. Louisian's Runaway Son Made One Fortune and Inherited Another.

Gustav A. Franz, who inherited one-tenth of the estate of his father, Erhardt D. Franz, which was once valued at $27,000,000, died of cancer last Sunday in Denver, it was learned today. He was 64 years old.

The body will be cremated and the ashes brought here to the family vault in Bellefontaine cemetery.

Gustav Franz ran away from his St. Louis home more than 50 years ago, long before his father took the $21,000,000 in Burroughs Adding Machine stock on which the family fortune was built.

Fifteen years old at the time, he started work in Arizona as a cowhand. Soon he acquired his own herd. Later he entered the mining business and he made his own fortune out of gold mines.

He was in St. Louis a year ago for treatment of an aneurysm, a bullet wound in his shoulder, received when he served in a Sheriff's posse which fought it out "with some bad men" years ago in Arizona.

On his St. Louis visit, he told a Post-Dispatch reporter he had just bought for $200,000 a gold mining property near his home at Ouray, Colo.

Gustav Franz was one of 10 children. He said a year ago his father's estate had dwindled to about $7,000,000. When he, he visited his niece, Mrs. Joseph E. Burger, 453 Yorkshire drive, Webster Groves.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lydia Franz; three sons, Gustav A. Jr. and Oscar G. Franz of Ouray, and R. K. Franz of Los Angeles; and three daughters, Mrs. William Beatty of Los Angeles, Mrs. J. H. Pelt of Denver and Miss Kathryn Franz of Ouray.

FARLEY ARRIVES AT HAMBURG

Says He Hopes to Meet German Postal Officials.

HAMBURG, Germany, Aug. 4 (AP).—United States Postmaster-General Farley, with his daughters, Ann and Betty, arrived here on the liner Manhattan yesterday for a European vacation. He said he had no official appointments in Germany and the only official persons he hoped to see here were members of the German postal service.

To German correspondents who met him at the pier he said: "I am here for a vacation; there is nothing political in this trip."

Beals vs. Wallace

Books in the News

American farmer has shown himself capable of properly preserving the land, and must be deprived of his right to ruin it, Carleton Beals writes in the latest of his studies, "America" (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia).

Resolution to the country's land problem, Beals decides, is not to be found in program of Secretary Wallace, which is a "graveyard policy." There should be no restriction, he says, rather content as something to be exploited or, but as a national patrimony to be judiciously and conserved. Controls, he are inevitable.

monopolies, tenantry and share-croppers be ended and Americans be given access to the soil, says Mr. Beals.

land of America," he writes. "must be considered a sort of public as it was before it was originally distributed—but not as an idle reserve given access to the land can, as of old, be permitted to destroy it, through careless erosion, plant-proper crops, or other abuses."

first part of Mr. Beals' volume is, with occasional lapses into inane exaggeration, of American history, a tale in which greed, cruelty, oppression and theft play major parts. The second part deals with the own observations. It shows he can injustice or a landlord's oppression as well as from a history book.

In a final chapter he pays his respects to Wallace, suggesting that "in the shape, he will succeed in starving all the administration's land use proposals, largely ignores the needs of mass of farm population, while deploring markets and increasing the food. It all boils down, he says, "to more to produce less to pay still in order that fewer of us can produce still less."

ADOPTED BABY IN LINE FOR MILLION MILLIONS

Two-Month-Old Boy Becomes Potential Heir of Two Great Family Fortunes.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 4 (AP)—The Richard King Mellons withheld details of the adoption of a two-month-old boy who as their only child becomes potential heir to two great family fortunes and may some day guide the Mellon industrial and financial empire.

"I think the statement we have adopted a boy two months old will suffice," said Mellon, who is 40 years old. He added that the procedure was through "regular methods" a week ago but would not say where the baby was obtained.

The baby was given the name Richard Prosser Mellon, Prosser being Mrs. Mellon's family name. He is the third in the Mellon family to bear the name Richard Mellon.

Richard Mellon, his mother and sister inherited his father's estate of more than $25,000,000 in addition to trust funds and other arrangements.

Known as "Dick" since he came to work as a bank messenger in 1920 to learn the business from the ground up, Mellon is president of the Mellon National Bank, major link in Mellon-controlled business having assets exceeding $750,000,000.

He has more than 35 official positions. His cousin, Paul Mellon, $2, son of Andrew W. Mellon, is not so active. Paul Mellon has a daughter but no son.

Mrs. Richard Mellon, Constance Prosser McCauley, is wealthy in her own right. She is the daughter of Seward Prosser, chairman of the Bankers' Trust Co. of New York. A divorcee, she married Mellon in 1936.

SCHOOL BOARD CONSIDERS PLAN FOR PAINTING OFFICE BUILDING

Officials Decide Interior Needs Decoration More Than Heating

Plans Need New Heating, Officials Decide Interior Needs Decoration More Than Heating

The Board of Education has under consideration a request to the PWA to permit substitution of interior painting of the board's seven-story office building, 911 Locust street, for installation of a new heating boiler there, under a contract with the PWA.

The board's decision that painting was needed more than heating, at the general congressional acceptance of the President's thesis that national defense involved the security of the entire hemisphere.

For the boiler, the board had been prepared to spend about $12,800. Officials decided that painting was needed more than heating, at the general congressional acceptance of the President's thesis that national defense involved the security of the entire hemisphere.

The board's share of the cost would be taken from its permanent, or endowment fund, which holds title to the building.

MAN WHO TWICE THREATENED PRESIDENT SENT TO PRISON

John Dean, 66, Kansas City, Was Put on Probation After Writing First Letter.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 4 (AP)—John Dean, 66, Kansas City, was ordered to Federal prison today for writing threatening letters to President Roosevelt.

After being given a 12-month term a year ago, Dean's sentence was changed to three years' probation because he assured United States District Judge Merril E. Otis he "didn't mean it."

Today's action was based on a recent letter to the President in which Dean wrote, "You are a great menace to America and should be removed somehow." His earlier letter stated, "I want you to go to Washington and kill you."

SHERIFF REFUSES TO TAKE GORE TO MURDER HEARING

Contents Order Was Served Outside Jurisdiction of Benton (Ill.) City Court.

BENTON, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP)—Because the Franklin County fairground is outside the jurisdiction of the Benton City Court, there was no court appearance today for George W. Gore Jr. of Cape Girardeau, Mo., who is charged with the murder of his step-mother.

Sheriff Ed Powell had been ordered by City Judge Paul A. Jones to take Gore to a hearing but Powell ignored it on the ground the order was served illegally yesterday at the fairground.

State's Attorney Rex Jones succeeded today in quashing the service on the order and the writ of habeas corpus which was obtained by Gore's attorney.

County officials announced Tuesday Gore had confessed killing Mrs. Nancy Gore here July 23 and has since refused to say where Gore was held. Today they told Gore's lawyer he was in the Murphysboro Jail and agreed to let the lawyer see him.

Steels, motors, rubbers, minerals and specialties were in the fade-away. Rails, and coal companies held declines to very small amounts. Brokers, as usual, had a few explanations for the retreat. One thing, those who follow charts exhibited a smattering of pessimism because the index average has been unable on a few of occasions to penetrate the ceiling the July peak. It averaged once or twice, but it has not yet broken back.

WEEK'S AUTO OUTPUT

CHICAGO, Aug. 4 (AP).—Automotive reports placed the automobile factories for the week at 28,250 units. Assemblies totaled 40,575 for this week a year ago.

It was the only major motor in normal output this year, said that producers are trying to get into 1940 models wherever possible to make up for what appears to be an expanding car market.

PONTOON BRIDGE TO LINK DANZIG AND EAST PRUSSIA

Span Was Completed at Time of Dispute Over Polish Customs — Will Be Placed Later.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, Aug. 4 (AP).—Danzig authorities announced today that a pontoon bridge which would provide the only bridge connection over the Vistula River between the Free City of Danzig and German East Prussia was completed and ready for installation.

Announcement of the new bridge follows a threat Tuesday by Danzig Nazi leaders to ignore the established frontier after a revival of the "herring and margarine war" between Poland and Danzig.

The bridge has not been put in place and authorities said they were not certain when it would be anchored. It will be entirely on Free City territory and will connect Kaesemark, on the west side of the river, and Rotabude, on the east.

The completed bridge is now at the Danzig dock awaiting installation.

Versailles treaty provisions place the Free City within the Polish customs administration. Nazis charged recently that Polish restrictions on the margarine and herring trade would cost Danzig valuable business.

The Danziger Vorposten then declared that if such disturbances of trade continued, "the Free State will direct its trade to the German market without regard for the former customs frontier now broken by Poland."

The Polish Commissioner to Danzig, Marian Chodacki, sent a note to the Nazi-controlled Danzig Senate replying to the protest. Measures limiting Danzig margarine exports to Poland will be withdrawn only if the Senate "makes sure that the rights of Polish officials to inspect and control Danzig's customs personnel are respected," Chodacki declared.

Polish inspectors in a large Danzig margarine exporting plant were withdrawn, charging they were hindered in their work. The effect was to deprive the firm of duty-free exports to Poland.

Polish Press Thinks Nazis Plan to Open Frontier Forcefully.

WARSAW, Aug. 4 (AP).—Concern over Danzig increased today with the Polish press freely discussing the possibility Danzig Nazis are preparing forcibly to open the frontier between the Free City and German East Prussia.

The Kurjer Poranny declares the Nazis "obviously" would like to brush aside 140 Polish customs inspectors and open the frontier "in order to see what effect would be produced."

Kurjer Polski charges the Nazis have prepared detailed instructions regarding a boycott by which Polish officials would be barred from Danzig customs houses.

Already, the newspaper says, Polish customs men are receiving notices from Nazi landlords that leases on their homes are being canceled.

SUPERIOR MAKES STATEMENT ABOUT BISHOP ABLEWHITE

The Rt. Rev. Henry Tucker Denies Reports Ex-St. Louisan Took Church Fund.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—The Rt. Rev. Henry Tucker of New York, presiding Episcopal Bishop in the United States, in a statement today expressed confidence in the Rt. Rev. Hayward S. Ablewhite, former St. Louisan, who resigned as Bishop of Northern Michigan after a diocesan committee reported a shortage in church funds.

A civil suit seeking recovery of from $75,000 to $90,000 is pending at Marquette, Mich., against trustees of the funds. Bishop Tucker said: "It has been brought to my attention reports have been circulated to the effect that Bishop Ablewhite had appropriated for his own use the proceeds of the sale of securities held in the Bishop G. Mott Williams missionary fund. 'I am glad to state that the evidence that has been brought to my attention, in my opinion, shows conclusively that the securities were handed over to one in whom Bishop Ablewhite had utmost confidence for appraisal and investment.'"

TWO EAST SIDE PARISHES WARNED TO CANCEL LOTTERIES

Sheriff's Aid Says Lotto Games at Granite City and Venice Will Be Banned, It Held.

Lotto games scheduled to be held Sunday night by St. Joseph's Catholic parish of Granite City and Monday night by St. Mark's parish of Venice, will be raided if they attempt to operate, Chief Deputy Sheriff Ben Wood of Madison County announced today at Edwardsville.

He said he learned that St. Mark's parish had been giving merchandise as prizes at weekly games. This practice, he declared, was merely a subterfuge, as the merchandise was exchangeable for cash.

Wood said the Sheriff's office had always been "lenient with churches, permitting them to conduct lotto games once a year to raise church funds, but now they are holding them once a week."

FIRST GOVERNOR'S WIFE Authentic and historically correct in detail is the miniature figure which represents Mrs. Alexander McNair, wife of Missouri's first Governor. It is one of a series of 20 dolls recently placed on display in the Missouri Building at the San Francisco Fair, the work of Mrs. Mary Paxton, teacher in Christian College, Columbia, Mo., and Mrs. T. J. Talbert.

NEW WARES IN THE MOVIE MARKET

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

ON BROADWAY

with Walter Winchell

Walter Winchell is on vacation. His guest columnist today is Mrs. Spencer Tracy, wife of the film star.

YOU have to get an actor early, and maybe then it's too late. It all starts way back when he's 4 or 5 years old and eats that first chocolate ice cream cone. If only at that time someone would take him firmly by the shoulders and say, son, shun it! Shun it like you would the measles, or it will make a character man of you at 25. What I mean to say is, he ought to decide right then what kind of an actor he wants to be, and eat toward it.

MRS. SPENCER TRACY

I would like to say that the first time I saw Spencer he was eating a very large piece of chocolate cake with chocolate ice cream and chocolate sauce, but that wouldn't be true. It was the second time—but the same day. The first time was in White Plains, New York, at the theater where we were rehearsing for a stock performance of "The Man Who Came Back." The second time was in the little shop around the corner, which served as confectionery store, ice cream parlor and tea room. I think he ate at least five meals a day there. If you saw him twice on one day, one time or the other, he was sure to be eating cake or ice cream or chocolate sauce, or all three.

This is a bad beginning for any actor, and should have been a warning to a prospective wife. But how was I to know this gentle vice was to become Hollywood's No. 1 menace; that Honolulu would be remembered for its coconut ice cream and Maxine's, in Paris, for those crocks of thick yellow cream? And so I married him.

OF COURSE, I don't take the credit, except in a roundabout way, for those next few years. As long as he married someone, and she had no money, it would have worked out the same. Poverty is a great help in dieting. We didn't struggle with a lettuce leaf and a green vegetable, or a lamb chop and a slice of pineapple for lunch. We just skipped the meal.

It was about the third year we went back to three meals a day in an apartment on East Ninety-eighth street, but food—that is, too much of it, and in relation to calories and pounds—never troubled us until we came to Hollywood. And then one day, he said, "You know, I'll have to go a little easy on the diet; I'm beginning to gain. You'll have to watch that for me." And there it was... the Menace.

So, I had to find a sensible diet for Spencer. I decided merely to cut down on starches, fats and sugar, no potatoes, one piece of bread, no rich desserts, no chocolate, no whipped cream, and only fruit and coffee for breakfast.

But still the weight crept up. Every few months found him a pound or two heavier. "There's something wrong with this diet at home," he insisted.

Then, one day, I was talking to a mutual friend. "My, oh, my," he said, "but that boy loves ice cream sodas. Yesterday afternoon I sat with him while he downed three in succession." I began to see light. But, I still haven't found anything I can do about it.

SPENCER HAD been trying to lose 10 pounds for "Northwest Passage." As far as I could find out, the day he left for location in the wilds of Idaho, he had lost two pounds of them. That set me to worrying, wondering if he would make the weight.

"Don't worry," said Spencer. "The food is going to be terrible, and between that and the heat (it was 106 up there that day) and the ticks, and getting up at 5:30 in order to start shooting at 7, I'll be thin enough when we reach the trek back from St. Francis. And there won't be a drug store or a sundae anywhere within miles."

"Dandy," said I. Hope springs eternal. He was just getting on the train when I noticed a large box under the coat thrown over his arm. "What's that?" I asked. "Just a little present Mother gave me," he said airily. But I knew the look. I peeked under the coat. Yes, it was a box of chocolate candy.

Case Records of a Psychologist

By Dr. George W. Crane
of Northwestern University

CASE M-183: Joanna M., aged 31, is the wife of an accountant. "I am all broken up about her, because she ran off with another man," her husband wept in my office. "Yesterday I saw her again, and talked to her, but she will not come back to our home. She seems to be infatuated with this other fellow. He is no good, but he seems to have cast a spell over her. How could she ever bear to leave me, Dr. Crane?"

"I have always given her a liberal allowance for running our home and she has all the modern conveniences. Dr. Crane, is she just cheap and fickle, or what is wrong?"

DIAGNOSIS: If a husband refused to give his wife three square meals a day, and she were starving for nourishment, would it seem strange if she seemed tempted by every restaurant she might pass on the street? And if another man offered her a delicious steak dinner with French fried potatoes, pie and coffee, would it be unnatural for her to steal away for such a meal, albeit clandestinely?

Wives are hungry for more than a liberal allowance check and a home equipped with modern conveniences. Those are very commendable assets of a good husband, but if he fails to feed his wife's very normal hunger for affection and love, he is also starving her. Sable coats and oriental rugs will not fully divert a food starved woman from the constant gnawing of her stomach. Nor will such costly gifts and financial liberality stifle her hunger for love. Most women are content to remain faithful to their husbands IF those husbands just remember that women must have love and affection regularly.

In fact, women will submit to food starvation more gracefully than to love starvation. Many wives cling to husbands in devotion and loyalty, even though they are living on beans and corn bread, providing love is evident.

Conversely, the wives of many rich men are faithless, not because they don't have plenty to eat and luxurious clothing or homes, but because they lack love.

Gloom at Saratoga

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 4.—could find nothing to gamble on but the ponies, the stock market, the match game and similar devices which are within the law and consequently nothing to write home about—except for more dough. On this, the fifth day of Saratoga's diamond jubilee racing meet, the disconsolate racing fraternity which wants action for its money—could find nothing to gamble on but the ponies, the stock market, the match game and similar devices which are within the law and consequently nothing to write home about—except for more dough. The situation seems to boil down to a large and rowdy gambling establishment with Saratoga. It has long been a hangout for tough characters and mobsters who can get a foot inside the door of the suave, elegant gambling casinos in the region of Lake Saratoga. No one, not even the blades whose money is burning a hole in their pockets at the moment, are particularly eager to see this place in operation.

But the management has declared if other casinos open for business, it'll open, too, or know the reason why. There is a general belief that the lake casinos would have no difficulty if some means could be devised to eliminate their unsavory, belligerent rival.

In the meantime, all casinos are closed for the second season in succession; the monied toffs are getting restless and Saratoga itself is having the vapors lest this mark the beginning of its end as a famous August resort.

SARATOGA HAS water for both drinking and dunking, all on the alkaline side. The customer who comes here in search of health rather than horses is able to decarbonize his engine while revitalizing his chassis.

Even one or two baths in the great State-owned spa send me forth feeling like a glamor girl. When I was young it was patent that I was not going to grow up to be the kind of girl for whom gentlemen provide champagne in bathing quantities. But for from $1.50 to $3 any Cinderella can buy herself a bubble bath in Saratoga.

To lie in a huge tub filled with natural carbonated water fizzing away like vintage champagne will make even the homeliest woman feel like a combination of Hedy Lamarr and Ann Sothern, and that alone is worth the price of admission.

The State of New York aided by the Federal Government has spent millions of dollars in building three sets of State-owned baths on the 1300-acre, State-owned reservation here. The proletariat takes the waters at the Lincoln baths for $1.50 the tub-full; the bourgeoisie patronize the Washington and pay $1.75, and the upper crust relaxes in the Roosevelt baths at $3 a clip.

The Roosevelt baths form the largest, newest and most ambitious unit, patterned after the elaborate spas in Central Europe. Built since 1933 and named for the current President, it is sometimes advisable to tell the princes of privilege that the baths were named for Teddy and not Franklin if they are to relax and keep their blood pressure down.

The principles of the baths in the three divisions of the spa do not indicate any difference in the quality of the treatments, but merely the social swank of the patron, who has his choice of any of the three. At the peak of the bathing unit—the racing-season, the three units combined administer 2500 treatments in a single day.

Coffee-Making Care Never mix stale and fresh coffee. Use up all the old coffee before opening a new package. Keep coffee tightly covered. Since the oils from coffee can cling to the pot and give your brew a disagreeable flavor, always wash the pot daily in hot water and plenty of suds. Rinse it in boiling water and air it out often.

Obesity Diet Best Kept Up Over Months

Weight Loss Varies Because of Water Retention—Calories Count.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A DIET for obesity should contain 1300 calories a day, distributed with 65 grams of protein, 60 grams of fat, 150 grams of carbohydrate, and the essential minerals and vitamins. The diet must be kept up for some time. Weight loss on a diet goes by spurts because while there is actual loss of flesh this is masked by water retention. Three weeks to a month after going on a diet the body weight suddenly goes down, then remains stationary for another month, etc.

BREAKFAST:	SAMPLE MEAL:
5 to 10 per cent fruit	One-half cup cereal
Bread (toasted or plain)	Two slices wheat toast
Butter	One teaspoon butter
Beverage	Coffee—10 per cent saccharine if desired
LUNCHEON OR SUPPER:	SAMPLE MEAL:
One serving lean meat, fish—Cottage cheese	One serving lean meat, fish—Cottage cheese
5 per cent vegetable, raw or cooked	One-half cup beans
10 per cent fruit or vegetable	One slice whole milk
Bread	SAMPLE MEAL:
Butter	One serving lean meat, fish—Cottage cheese
Beverage	Combination meal—One serving (lettuce, tomato, cucumber)
DINNER:	DINNER:
Lean meat or fish	One-half cup beans
Salad of 5 per cent vegetables	One slice whole milk
10 per cent hot vegetables	One slice whole milk
10 per cent fruit	One slice whole milk
Bread	One teaspoon butter
Butter	One cup
Beverage	One cup

Milk—One pint of whole milk used daily. If cream is desired the coffee or fruit, pour off the top of the milk.

Substitutes for the pint of whole milk:

- (a) One quart skimmed milk (milk which has gone through a separator).
- (b) One pint "cultured" buttermilk (if made from whole milk).
- (c) One quart churned buttermilk.
- (d) One-half tall can of evaporated milk.

Beverages: Clear tea, coffee or bouillon may be used if desired. Bread: White, whole wheat or rye. Whole wheat, graham or rye breads are preferable because they contain vitamin B and iron.

Salad Dressing: 1. Vinegar and condiments; 2. Mayonnaise or French dressing made with mineral oil.

Meat, eggs or fish may be prepared by any method except frying. The visible fat should be trimmed from the meat when it is ready to be served.

Saccharine is used as a substitute for sugar.

Five per cent vegetables are: asparagus, bean sprouts, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, chard, Chinese cabbage, cucumber, egg plant, endive, greens, beet; green mustard; kohlrabi, lettuce, okra, peppers, pumpkin, radish, spinach, string beans, summer squash, tomatoes, turnips and watercress.

Five per cent fruits are: honey dew melon, lemon juice, muskmelon, rhubarb, strawberries and watermelon.

Ten per cent vegetables are: beets, brussels sprouts, carrots, dandelion greens, leeks, olives, green onions, rutabagas and winter squash.

Ten per cent fruits are: blackberries, cranberries, currants, gooseberries, grapefruit, lime juice, oranges, orange juice, peaches and tangerines.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS M. F.: "How contagious is scabies? What care should be taken to keep other members of the family from getting it? How do you get rid of it?"

Answer: Scabies, or the itch, is caused by a small mite, scabietes, which penetrates the superficial layers of the skin. It is a female that does this, borrowing in order to lay her eggs. After she lays the eggs, she dies; the larvae hatch out in four to eight days. This activity causes intense itching. The burrow is marked by scales on the surface of the skin; hence, the name. The favorite spot of penetration is the skin on the webs between the fingers. It is quite contagious, the infection coming from linen (dirty hotel linen), underwear and from infected persons. Treatment should begin with a hot bath using soap and a scrub brush to move the scales, so the medicine which kills the mite can penetrate.

A. M.: "What causes poor circulation in the large toes of the foot? What causes enlarged gall-bladder? What can be done to prevent hardening of the arteries in old age? There and kind of medicine to stretch the arteries so that the blood can circulate?"

Answer: Poor circulation in the toes in your case is evidently due to hardening of the arteries. Enlargement of the gall-bladder is probably due to infection. Unless it causes a great deal of pain, it is best left alone in a patient with hardened arteries. It will correct itself. There is no medicine that can be used for hardened arteries. The only thing to do is to take a quit worrying and adjust your life to the limited powers your arteries allow you. You can't make the arteries young.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
FRIEND of mine is getting married the middle of August. In celebration, a party of six are going to a public country club for the evening. The bride wants to wear the dress in which she will be married. It is an ankle length white chiffon. We other girls thought we would wear similar evening dresses of similar weight and appearance. Would they be all right to wear there or would it be too late for summer dresses? Are evening or street clothes worn there mostly? The men plan to wear white or light suits. Will they be all right with our dresses? Also I would like to know when a group of four or six proceed to a table, when led by a waiter or not, who takes the lead and in what order should they walk? Also isn't it proper to tip the waiter 10 per cent of the bill?

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Chiffon evening dresses in mid-August would be perfectly proper for the country club and light suits for the men. The host or hostess should precede and seat the guests. If it is a Dutch treat party, the order makes no difference except that each girl should walk with her escort. Ten per cent in the case of a large check is a proper tip.

Dear Martha Carr:
I know you do not usually print items of this nature but I have tried other means, with no luck, so am hoping you will make an exception of this letter. I have lost a ten carat gold crescent pin which was given to me for graduation and which I prize highly. The name "Visitation" was inscribed across the front of the pin and the initials "K. J. J." across the back. A lady found this crescent and called my school but, to my sorrow, the school did not correctly record the lady's name or address and to date we have been unsuccessful in our attempts to locate her.

Dear Martha Carr:
JUST A WORD of advice to "E. D." You would be very wise to let your fiancé buy you a cedar chest. I have one and use it to store blankets, quilts, extra curtains and many other things. I received mine as a Christmas gift before we were married and then I kept my linens in it.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I HAVE A VERY pretty thin black velvet dress made plain princess style. Would it be all right to wear the first of September? And would patent leather or suede accessories be suitable?

September is not too early to wear black velvet provided the weather is not too warm. Either patent leather or suede is suitable.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
PEOPLE TELL ME I have pretty slender hands. Is there any place in St. Louis they use hands for modeling or photography?

Consult commercial photographers listed in the telephone book.

IN ANSWER TO "Just a Jangler." I would suggest you go to the Library and look over the poetry magazines and other magazines which seem to use your kind of work. Also, at book stores, perhaps, you would find the names of publishers of books of miscellaneous verse.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
COULD YOU tell me the name of the boy who played the part of the band leader in Deanna Durbin's show in the movie "That Certain Age"? Also to what studio do I send for picture of him?

I believe the boy who was the band leader in Deanna's little show was Jackie Cooper. However, you can write New Universal Studio, Universal City, Cal., for definite information and photograph.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I HAVE A plan for a party which would add to the enjoyment of a car and which I believe will be included as standard equipment on all new cars. It could either be built in during the manufacture of the new car or installed as extra equipment on older cars. Can you tell me who I can take this plan to, to find out whether or not it is of any value at present?

Why not contact some of the firms selling automobile parts? You will find these listed in the classified section of the telephone book.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
HOW MUCH SHOULD we weigh? I am 5 feet 6 inches, 16 years old. My sister is 5 feet 5 inches, 16 years old.

My cousin is getting married early in September, in church, about 9 a. m. Would a black and white checked suit with black pumps and white blouse be all right to wear?

Send stamped, addressed envelope for my weight-height chart. Your costume sounds very suitable.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
WILL YOU PLEASE tell me the names of all the movie studios?

Some of the leading studios are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Cal.; Paramount, 20th Century Fox, R. K. O., Columbia and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Hollywood; Republic, North Hollywood; Universal, University City, Cal.; Warner Bros., Burbank, Cal.; Walter Wanger Productions and United Artists, Los Angeles.

Lessons in Swimming

By Johnny Weissmuller and Eleanor Holm

LESSON NINETEEN.

IN picking up the separate steps of the breaststroke kick while holding to the side of the pool, you may have noticed that each step is like a similar one in the arm motion.

The tuck of the legs, knees together, which begins the kick, is the same as the tuck of the arms which brings your hands to your chin. The stretching and spreading of the legs is similar to the stretching of the arms—although the arms do not spread out. And the snapping together of the legs is similar to the spreading and pulling motion of the arms. Each supplies the power.

As the next item in kicking, use an inflated ball, an inner tube or anything else that floats—a block of wood will do if nothing else is handy. Rest your arms on this, and you are ready to practice the kick and let it actually move you.

Tomorrow—Full Breaststroke.

By Ely Culbertson

"DEAR MR. CULBERTSON: Then there is the single-tracker. When the bidding has ceased, the lead made, and the dummy disclosed, he mentally places all the cards and nothing can swerve him from his concept of the cards as they are or ought to be. Even his partner's clear signals are ignored or unnoticed. The one-way mind can't be changed.

"At a certain club in Pittsburgh the customary noon game was in progress and the following hand came up:

"North, dealer.

"Neither side vulnerable.

♠ 86
♥ A98
♦ AK952
♣ AQ4

♠ K73
♥ K53 ♦ J108
♣ 862

SOUTH

♠ AQ10942
♥ J62
♦ 73
♣ K95

"The bidding:

North East South West

1 diamond Pass 1 no trump Pass

2 clubs Pass 2 spades Pass

3 no trump Pass Pass

"The bidding was not too orthodox, but North's club bid was a second attempt to get South to show spades. It worked.

"West led the jack of diamonds. Declarer took the trick in dummy with the ace, then led the diamond king and a small one, hoping to clear the suit. The suit broke and East, the old single-tracker, was in the lead. The significance of his partner's failure to open hearts made no impression. A count of the cards would have disclosed the situation, but he made no count.

From the bidding he was sure his partner had good hearts and was disturbed that they had not been led. He would make up for that by leading them himself! He led the four of hearts. South played low, and West's king forced dummy's ace.

"Declarer could see eight tricks and needed one in spades for his game. He had discarded a small spade on the third round of diamonds and did not wish to force himself further. So he led the eight of spades, intending to finesse for the jack in East's hand.

"East went right up with the ace and West played the seven, thereby signalling for a spade continuation. East never noticed what his partner's card had been. He had decided hearts were the declarer's vulnerable point, and hearts he would play. The queen was led and, when the jack failed to fall, he set his jaw with grim determination and led the ten of hearts. He would fight it out with hearts if it took all summer!

"Net results for declarer: Two heart tricks, three in clubs, and four in diamonds.

"Who me? No, I wasn't North or a kibitzer. Was the engineer on that single-track railroad—E. O. K., Pittsburgh."

"My correspondent's 'punch line finish' has stolen my thunder. How can I jump on a man who so obviously has taken to sackcloth and ashes? There is one thing I can say, and that is that while this sort of defense is lamentably common, it is both encouraging and refreshing to find a culprit who either recognizes his own error or, having done so, makes no effort to alibi himself. If every player approached self-criticism with the same lack of false pride, there would be enormous improvement in the general caliber of play.

FAVORABLE buzzes between the sexes and between master and man today. Also good for putting things into the gears of the mind for future plans that will work out well. Not a day for drifting—pull on your oars and get somewhere.

Moving People.

There are great cycles of weather, making profound changes in the dryness and wetness of various localities, changing the paths of regular storm systems and in other ways altering living conditions. Millions have starved, migrated or fought wars as the direct result of weather cycle shifts. This is the influence of sun spots and planets on masses of people. Individuals feel it, too.

A BLACK FROCK For EARLY FALL

By Sylvia Stiles

EVEN though the calendar indicates that there's another month of summer, it's time to think about your first fall dress. Cool nights at the opera, rainy days in town and perhaps a late August vacation all are indications that the fashion-wise woman needs to be equipped with one smart-looking outfit.

The black dress appears as the perennial favorite to bridge the space between summer and fall and to serve on a multitude of occasions. It not only looks new and chic but, if chosen wisely, will be comparatively comfortable on many August days in St. Louis. There is the St. Louis stores show the trend of silhouette and illustrate the features that are essential to consider. The model at upper left is of black faille crepe, very dull of surface.

The narrow but low neckline, sleeves that are simply cut and barely cover the elbows and the standpoints of comfort, see that it has sleeves that are semi-short and that its neckline is not too high and binding. Likewise, check the fabric for such features as light weight, proof-against-wrinkles and pleasing qualities.

Now that you have disposed of those practical essentials, go as far as you like in looking up-to-date! Whether the skirt fullness swings toward the back, gathers at the front or goes all around is a question for each individual to decide. There is no doubt about the style importance of back fullness, the interest in bustles and the vogue of back peplums but there are many points at the front and sides. The fashionable frocks that have skirt fullness around the waistline are important point to remember is the skirt must be of generous width at the hemline.

The length of the skirt is another serious matter. They're wearing skirts extremely short again and the slim, youthful purchasers of new frocks aren't much concerned about covering their knees. In the matter of decoration, you will find that ingenious use of tucks and pleats adorn many bodies and that brooches are so gaudy that their stones can't be real ones. Embellishments, whether of jewelry or fabric manipulations are placed strategically. The idea is to make waistlines look small and to keep a snug-fitting line through the shoulders.

Reminiscences Of the Theater By Alice Brady

Actress Was Once Prima Donna in Gilbert and Sullivan Operas.

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 4.

INTERVIEWING Alice Brady is like talking with my own sister. For she started her career as prima donna in Gilbert and Sullivan operas with DeWolf Hopper when I began as his bride. I never dreamed I'd be doing a column and interviewing her. In fact, we did more reminiscing about the old days than about her superb performance in "Young Mr. Lincoln" in which the press of the country went to town for her. She was as thrilled over "The Mikado" in color as I was.

"Do you remember the day my throat closed?" she asked me. "We were doing 'Pirates of Penzance.' I ran into Wolfe's room and said, 'I can't put my finger down my throat. Skin touches skin!'

"Wolfe said in disgust: 'Well, what do you want your finger down your throat for? Get out there and sing!'

"So saying he pushed me onto the stage. Of course, I cracked on my top note. And I'll be darned if I didn't get an encore. Which taught me the unfailing tolerance of an audience.

"Years later, when I was doing 'Lady Alone' in New Haven, the Yale boys, evidently out for a big celebration, were having a high old time. So I held up my hand for quiet. 'Please be dears. You know, this is our livelihood. Couldn't we have a little silence?' They let us alone all right—there wasn't another laugh the rest of the evening."

I asked Alice if she was going back to the stage. "Yes, if I get a good play. But I don't want any more of these screwball comedies. I don't know anything about comedy. All I do is smile and camp."

You don't grow artistically out here but just keep on giving the same performance. She'd never met Mr. Zanuck, who has given her an opportunity to act both in "In Old Chicago" and "Young Mr. Lincoln" until his party after the preview there. He's now looking for another dramatic part for her.

When I reached for another hors d'oeuvre she chirped: "Gosh, Hedda, didn't you have any lunch? Why not stay for dinner, because we're having marinated herring and Irish stew?"

"Ever go to baseball?" asked I. "Don't you remember the one Wolfe took us to and I had sunstroke? I've never gone back."

When I wanted a picture of all her dogs, Alice said: "That's impossible. They don't speak. Snookie—the one I rescued from the pound—doesn't even like me. Several times he's tried to nip me."

She wears a silver coin bracelet and has coins from every picture she's ever played in. I asked her if it didn't weigh her down.

"Well, I used to sleep with it on until I knocked myself out."

Weight Loss Varies Because of Water Retention —Calories Count.

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

A DIET for obesity should contain 1300 calories a day, distributed with 65 grams of protein, 60 grams of fat, 250 grams of carbohydrate, and the essential minerals and vitamins.

The diet must be kept up for some time. Weight loss on a diet goes by spurts because while there is actual loss of flesh this is masked by water retention. Three weeks to a month after going on a diet the body weight suddenly goes down then remains stationary for another month, etc.
